Help Reaches Training Ship In Distress Off Va. Capes

Colder Here Tonight Will Take Her in Tow 25 Sea Cadets Aboard Many Hurt in Snow

The Coast Guard cutter Mendota early today reached the disabled American barkentine Marsala in distress 25 miles off Cape Henry, Va., and prepared to tow the vessel to Norfolk. Two of her five masts had been carried away.

In the wake of Thursday's snow and sleet storm which left the Marsala crippled, four persons were reported dead in Maryland, and scores injured in Washington and nearby as the District dug out from the worst November blizzard in history.

Distress signals from the Marsala, 436-foot sailing ship used for training merchant marine officers, 25 of whom were aboard, were picked up by the S. S. City of Savannah, and radioed to the Coast Guard shortly after dark.

Distress Rockets Seen

No radio equipment is carried on the Marsala, according to Coast Guard officers, but the Savannah apparently saw distress rockets. She reported that the Marsala was anchored in the open sea.

The Marsala is owned by the American Nautical Academy, headed by Capt. Oliver Bolt, who operates the vessel as a private training ship for the merchant marine. Claimed to be the largest sailing vessel in the world, the ship during the summer has carried as many as 1200 students. No list of crew or students on board was available at the headquarters of the academy in Washington.

More Cold Forecast

A minimum temperature of 20 degrees was forecast for the District before dawn today, with a promise of more cold to come by tomorrow night. Increasing cloudiness and rising temperatures that should carry the mercury about 10 degrees higher than yesterday's top of 34, were predicted for the District.

Weather officials said last night no more snow would fall here during the next few days.

Traffic mishaps and falls on slush and ice-coated streets and pavements accounted for dozens of injuries within the city limits Thanksgiving night and yesterday. Exposure to the cold and highway

Philadelphia Head Cited by Jury for 'Borrowing' $50,000

Philadelphia, Nov. 25 (AP).—Evidence that Mayor Wilson borrowed more than $50,000 from individuals and corporations "who might be interested in having him pull his punches," was presented today in the twelfth report of a special grand jury investigating gambling and law enforcement.

The jury suggested half a dozen individuals or corporations might have made the loans, cited in their own testimony, to influence the mayor to obtain his aid in labor troubles.

The report listed the loans, most of which it said had been secured without collateral and had not been repaid.

Liberalized Old-Age Pensions Asked by Senator McNary

Favors More Help
Urges Farm Change
Here for Conference

By Robert C. Albright.

Declaring for "liberalized" old-age pensions under the social security act, and for sharp changes in Administration farm and relief policies, Senate Minority Leader McNary returned to Washington yesterday for conference with Republican leaders.

The Oregon leader, whose Senate Republican flock gained eight recruits in the recent elections, said Republicans "must recognize they are still a minority party and responsibility for legislation still rests with the Democrats."

Without suggesting formal coalition, he said there would be enough Democrats, in his opinion, combined with Republicans, to decentralize relief, take more drastic controls out of the farm act and curtail Federal expenditures.

Will Not Dictate

"We will go along with Democrats or any group which promises to bring back sanity in legislation and normal conditions," he told reporters. "Republicans won't try to dictate, but they will co-operate on any 'Progressive-Conservative' program looking to the future. We are not going backward. We are going forward."

Without specific recommendations, McNary said liberalized old-age pensions must be considered in any amendment of the social security act, and predicted this would be one of the paramount issues before Congress.

"We might as well make up our

Girl, 10, Hurt As Strikers Toss Brick at Truck

Driver Is Attacked
Police Details Ordered
Negotiations Fail

A 10-year-old girl was injured yesterday as striking Griffith Consumers' truck drivers or sympathizers used clubs and bricks as well as their fists in an attempt to halt fuel deliveries and force the issue in the coal company strike.

At the same time, special police details were ordered "to give special attention" to Griffith Consumers' trucks attempting deliveries. In some cases scout cars escorted the trucks.

Union and company officials met with Labor Department conciliators but made little progress, John L. Conner, department mediator, said. He quoted H. Rozier Dulany, president of the company, as being anxious to defer a definite settlement "until the strike quiets down."

An innocent victim of the attacks, Dolores Loskarn, 10, of Baltimore, who was visiting her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Loskarn of 1412 Trinidad avenue northeast, suffered a deep gash in the leg when struck by a brick hurled by strikers in the 1200 block of Holbrook Terrace northeast.

Police were told that the accident occurred when two men drew up in an automobile alongside a truck making an oil delivery and one of them threw the missle through the truck's windshield. The brick glanced off and struck the child, who was treated at Sibley Hospital.

Robert Aikens, 40, of 10 H street northeast, was attacked by six colored men, one of whom struck him over the head with a club, as he attempted to make a coal delivery in the 400 block of Columbia road northwest. Knocked unconscious, Aikens was unable to identify the men.

AFL Workers Vote to Return To Stockyards

C. I. O. Pickets to Stay To Open Monday
Receipts Subnormal

By the United Press.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—American Federation of Labor livestock handlers voted unanimously today to return to work immediately in the struck Union Stockyards.

James R. Rice, secretary of the A. F. of L. Union, and a committee of 35 reported to O. T. Henkle, vice president and general manager of the Union Stockyards & Transit Co., that 275 men had cast votes and that between 150 and 400 men were ready to report at work at once.

Henkle replied that the company would not need them until Monday morning.

Handlers affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations went on strike Monday, paralyzing the huge mart which sprawls over a square mile of Chicago's South Side. The Chicago Livestock Exchange suspended trading and notified farmers to cease sending their stock to Chicago until the controversy was settled.

C. I. O. Union Recognized

The C. I. O. Union is the recognized bargaining agent.

It was announced at C. I. O. headquarters tonight that approximately 1,100 members of Stockhandlers Local 347 (beef division), had voted "unanimously" to take a "holiday" tomorrow on the Armour plant killing floors as a gesture of sympathy for striking stockhandlers.

Henkle said the A. F. L. vote would have no effect on tomorrow's conference scheduled at 10 a. m., between company and C. I. O. representatives.

Ben Brown, president of the C. I. O. union local, said that "as far as we are concerned there is no A. F. L. union here."

Navy Assigns Weather Expert To Agriculture Bureau Here

Commander Francis W. Reichelderfer, outstanding naval authority on weather conditions, yesterday was assigned to duty with the Agriculture Department, according to Navy Department orders. Now attached to the U. S. S. Utah, Commander Reichelderfer is expected to assume his new duties next week.

Reichelderfer

Although the exact nature of his assignment remains to be announced, the post of chief of the Weather Bureau has been vacant since the death of Dr. Willis R. Gregg last September.

Formerly head of the aerology section of the Bureau of Aeronautics, Commander Reichelderfer was one of the first naval officers to study the "air mass" analysis method of forecasting weather conditions developed in Norway after the World War. It was largely on the basis of his report, the culmination of an eight-month study, that the aerology section was organized and the old methods of weather forecasting dropped.

SEC Calls Transamerica Data False

Hearing Ordered
Profits in Dispute
Giannini Pay Issue
Figures 'Misleading'

By the United Press.

The Securities and Exchange Commission charged last night that on August 7, 1937, Transamerica Corporation, West Coast investment and holding company, filed a registration statement and an annual report containing "false and misleading statements of material facts."

The commission ordered a hearing here January 16 to determine whether the corporation's capital stock should be removed from listing on the New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco stock exchanges.

The registration statement covered 11,590,784 shares of $2 par value capital stock. It was filed along with the annual report and other financial statements of the corporation and its subsidiaries, which the commission claimed "do not correctly reflect the true financial condition."

18 Items Listed

The SEC listed 18 items as containing statements which it said "it has reasonable grounds to believe" were false and misleading.

In its order for the hearing, the commission alleged it had reason for believing that the combined condition report for 1936 of three Transamerica Corporation associates—the Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association, First National Bank in Reno and Bank of America (California)—contained false and misleading statements. This report, which was filed with other financial documents by Transamerica Corporation, claimed undivided profits, net, of $22,503,612. This figure, the SEC charged, was "false and misleading."

The commission alleged that by shifting reserves and by showing inadequate reserves, a profit larger than it was in fact was claimed in the combined condition statement.

Discounts Listed

The combined report also listed in the asset column loans and discounts totaling $530,800,100. The commission said it had reasonable grounds to believe that this item "includes estimated losses and doubtful accounts aggregating in excess of $8,000,000 and slow accounts in excess of $125,000,000 held by Bank of America N. T. & S. A."

"Registrant has failed to disclose these losses, doubtful items and slow accounts in the report of condition or elsewhere in the registration statement, has failed to provide any reserve for such losses and doubtful accounts, and, in the supplementary

Gypsy Rose Lee Will Bare All—but Not About Reds

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 25 (AP).—Gypsy Rose Lee, strip-tease artist, said tonight she could not go to Cleveland to appear before members of the Dies Committee on un-Americanism, but promised, "I'll bare everything—if the committee will come to Columbus."

She said she was asked to testify as to Communistic activities in Hollywood, with reference to contributions to a fund to aid the Spanish loyalists.

Told she would have to testify if subpenaed, Miss Lee rippled:

"Well, it's the first time I ever got billing with Shirley Temple—and I think it's marvelous." (The child actress was mentioned once in connection with the Dies investigation.)

Wilson Sees Hull; May Go Back Soon

Ship Ends Mad Dash
Aide 'Sure' of Return
Secretary Sails
Sees 'Hope' at Lima

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 25.—A secretary of Ambassador Hugh R. Wilson said tonight he felt sure "we will return to duty in Berlin soon" as the Ambassador himself, summoned home by President Roosevelt "for instructions," raced by ship, cutter and automobile to a closely guarded 14-minute conference aboard ship with Cordell Hull, Secretary of State.

In New York Harbor the discussion between the Ambassador to Germany and his immediate superior was held in closest secrecy.

From here, Wilson prepared to go directly to Washington. He expected to see President Roosevelt at Warm Springs Sunday.

Wilson was taken off the liner Manhattan on a revenue cutter, landed at the Battery and sped by automobile along the waterfront to the pier of the liner Santa Clara, on which Hull headed the American delegation to the Pan-American conference in Peru.

Police Wedge Necessary

Hull had arrived from Washington at 3 p. m. and went aboard ship to await the Ambassador.

All visitors were ordered off the ship during the conference. At its conclusion a police wedge was necessary to jam Wilson back to the pier.

Wilson's secretary, Peter Belin, remained aboard the Manhattan until it docked.

He said there was "surprisingly little damage" to property of American citizens or American Jews in Berlin.

"I understand," he added, "that the German government has given assurance that insurance companies would reimburse foreign business for whatever damage was incurred on their insured properties.

"Some American Jews have recently left Germany but I could not say how many."

Wilson Declines Comment

Wilson declined to answer any questions, saying only, "I intend conferring in Washington."

Accompanying Wilson to the Santa Clara was Myron C. Taylor, who sails tomorrow for London as ambassador plenipotentiary to discuss the refugee situation.

Wilson's return followed by two days the departure of Dr. Hans Dieckhoff, German Ambassador to the United States, who was summoned home to report on the "queer

Envoy's Lost Bags, Not Wilson's Liner, Delay Hull Sailing

New York, Nov. 25.—All day long the liner Manhattan sped toward this port so she could arrive in time for Ambassador Hugh Wilson, coming home from Germany, to have even a few minutes with Secretary of State Hull before United States delegates sailed on the Santa Clara for the eighth inter-American conference in Peru.

When it appeared the Manhattan might be late, Grace line officials offered to hold the Santa Clara, but Hull refused the courtesy.

The Manhattan arrived in time. Wilson was taken from her by Coast Guard cutter and rushed to the Santa Clara's berth for his talk with Hull.

Then it was discovered that the baggage of Miguel Lopez Pumarejo, Colombian Ambassador to this country, who also was to sail on the Santa Clara, was missing. Sailing was delayed 40 minutes while the baggage was searched for in vain.

Havana Cheers Batista's Return

Havana, Nov. 25 (AP).—Col. Fulgencio Batista, Cuba's strong man, returned home from his United States visit today to one of the greatest welcome celebrations ever witnessed in Havana.

The capital was gaily decorated, and thousands of Cubans, taking advantage of an official holiday decreed for the occasion, poured into the city aboard special trains.

The visit to the United States, the colonel's first trip from his native soil, and his talks with President Roosevelt in Washington were hailed here as contributing greatly to Cuban-American relations.

General Strike Called By Unions in France

5,000,000 Scheduled to Walk Out Wednesday
Daladier Decrees Control of Industries
Guards Battle Crowds Shouting 'Hang Him'

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 25.—Premier Daladier tonight countered a rapidly-growing strike movement directed against him by preparing the government to take over affected industries "in case of need."

The premier acted swiftly and defiantly at the end of a critical day in which the strong Socialist Party demanded his immediate resignation and the General Confederation of Labor called a 24-hour nationwide general strike of its 5,000,000 members for next Wednesday.

Both moves were in protest against Daladier's decree laws which, among other things, suspended the 40-hour week.

May Dissolve Reds' Party

[Daladier was reported to be considering dissolution of the Communist Party, the United Press said.]

With armed mobile guards and police maintaining order among the country's more than 100,000 strikers, the premier fought back at his labor foes by issuing a decree authorizing the minister of public works to requisition strike-paralyzed mines and industries in the north of France "in case of need." The decree will become effective with publication in the official journal, probably tomorrow.

A government spokesman also said Daladier had taken steps to

Taylor Says U.S. Won't Get Flood of Aliens

Makes Promise on Radio Talks With Hull, Wilson To Join Refugee Parley

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Nov. 25—The American people were assured tonight by Myron C. Taylor, vice chairman representing the United States on the intergovernmental committee on political refugees, that the committee's plans do not involve "flooding" this or any other country with aliens of any race or creed.

Taylor's speech, understood to have been read beforehand and approved by the Administration in Washington, was given over the Blue Network of the National Broadcasting System.

Taylor is returning to Europe on the Normandie today at the specific request of President Roosevelt, who, he said, had been moved by "the urgency of this question" to ask him to rejoin the committee created last July.

Confers With Hull

A few hours before his speech, Taylor—formerly chairman of the United States Steel Corporation—conferred with Secretary of State Hull and Hugh R. Wilson, American Ambassador to Berlin, who arrived here in mid-afternoon. They talked aboard the steamer Santa Clara, on which Secretary Hull and the American delegation to the Pan-American conference at Lima sailed about 5 p. m.

In his broadcast, delivered at 9:15 p. m., Taylor said the intergovernmental committee on political refugees "hoped" the German government would co-operate with it in replacing the present chaotic con-

Jewish Refugee Blames Hypnosis In Envoy's Killing

Paris, Nov. 25 (AP).—Herschel Grynszpan, the 17-year-old Polish Jewish refugee from Germany who fired the shot that set off Germany's latest anti-Semitic drive, told a magistrate today he was in "a state of hypnosis" when he fatally wounded Ernst vom Rath, German Embassy third secretary, November 7.

He spoke in a hearing in which his uncle and aunt, Abraham and Chana Grynszpan, were ordered to stand trial Tuesday on charges of sheltering him despite the fact that he had been ordered expelled from France.

In addition to the charge of murder placed against him, he also is held on the minor charge of violating the order for his expulsion.

Pius Felled By Stroke; Doctors Fear New Attack

Heart Is Weakened
Given Adrenalin
Oxygen Tent Used
Mind Still Active

By the United Press.

Vatican City (Saturday), Nov. 26 The United Press was informed by an unimpeachable source early today that Pope Pius XI has received extreme unction.

The service was performed by Lorenzo Cardinal Lauri when the cardinal called on the Holy Father Friday morning.

(Administration of extreme unction or the last sacrament ordinarily is given at the request of a sick person and means the invalid believes he is in danger of death.)

At Pontiff's Request

The informant said the Pope personally requested administration of the sacrament.

Cardinal Lauri acted in his capacity as head confessor of the church.

Information from Vatican City at 2 a. m. was that the Pope was sleeping peacefully after his personal physician, Prof. Aminta Milani, had given him new injections of camphor oil.

A Vatican informant said "the situation in the Vatican is entirely normal."

Sinking After Stroke

Vatican City, Nov. 25 (AP).—Pope Pius XI collapsed today from a serious heart attack, and after physicians first said he was recovering slowly, other sources later reported his condition had grown worse.

The physicians indicated belief that immediate danger to the life of the 81-year-old pontiff had passed, but his chief physician, Dr. Aminta Milani, remained near the Pope's bedroom lest he suffer another attack which might be fatal.

A Vatican medical bulletin described his illness as cardiac asthma, while another informant said it was myocarditis (inflammation of the heart muscles).

An oxygen tent was used to ease the pontiff's breathing soon after his collapse at 9:30 a. m. (3:30 a. m. Eastern standard time), but the tent was removed when his condition improved.

Pope's Heart Weak

Anxiety for the Pope was heightened because his heart was weakened by his serious illness two years ago.

He was confined to his bed on December 5, 1936, for the first time since he became Pope. He suffered paralysis of both legs and did not walk again until February, 1937.

More than four months passed from the beginning of his illness until he was able to appear in public on March 28, 1937, at Easter mass in St. Peter's Cathedral.

Afflictions he suffered then included arteriosclerosis (hardening of the arteries), varicose veins, high blood pressure, myocarditis, thrombosis (clotting of the blood) in the left leg, and asthma.

Collapses After Mass

The Holy Father collapsed just as he was leaving his private apartment this morning on his way to an antechamber, where he was to have received several cardinals and bishops in private audiences. He had celebrated mass shortly before.

Papal secretaries saw the Pope, overcome by dizziness, sink to the floor. Quickly they carried him to his bedroom, and physicians, including Dr. Milani, were summoned. Once he was in bed, Dr. Filippo Rocchi gave injections of adrenalin

Inquiry Split As Willkie Calls TVA 'Brutal'

2 Intercede for Him
Grilling Held Unfair
Norris Doubts Sincerity

By Sidney Olson,

Two Republican members of the Congressional committee investigating the Tennessee Valley Authority yesterday took up cudgels in behalf of Wendell Willkie, utility leader, when Willkie protested that questioning was "unfair."

Representatives Jenkins, of Ohio and Wolverton, of New Jersey joined Willkie in objecting to the line of examination pursued by Francis Biddle, committee counsel.

Both asserted that Biddle's questions were aimed at serving the interests of David E. Lilienthal, youthful TVA director.

Willkie Calls TVA 'Brutal'

Willkie, New Yorker who heads the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation—one of whose properties is the Tennessee Electric Power Company, TVA's foe—had declared that TVA had been "brutal, cruel, inhuman and unfair" in its treatment of the Tennessee Electric.

When Biddle questioned the dark-haired utility spokesman closely on details of negotiations between Lilienthal and Willkie for TVA purchase of the Tennessee Electric, both Republican Congressmen joined in heated agreement that the questioning would be of no value to anyone except Lilienthal, assuming that the latter wanted to drive a "hard bargain" with the utility in the sales.

Biddle, repeatedly under fire by the Republican members before, shot back that the committee had a right to know whether TVA had been unfair, and also whether the Tennessee company had been unfair to the Government.

Senator Schwartz (Democrat), Wyoming, presiding, interceded for Biddle, as did Representative Thomason (Democrat), of Texas. Thomason ventured the opinion that the committee should determine the exact extent of the difference in viewpoints in the negotiations but that details of the entire proceedings were unnecessary.

Wolverton, demanding to know Biddle's purposes, retorted:

"It seems to me that this line of questioning can serve no useful purpose except to assist Mr. Lilienthal in his negotiations for purchase of this property. It strikes me that you are simply asking for piecemeal information. If it is not a general investigation of the negotiations, I would like to know by what authority you are going into this matter."

Lilienthal and Willkie have disagreed primarily over cost in the sale negotiation. Willkie, from the stand, declared he thought it "quite unfair" for Biddle to question him about individual items involved in the sale without giving his company a chance to present lengthy expert testimony on all the factors involved.

Norris Doubts "Sincerity"

Down in Knoxville, Tenn., meanwhile, according to an Associated Press dispatch, Senator Norris (independent), Nebraska, described the testimony of Willkie as "only another attempt to distract the attention of the American people from his past and present unfair and prejudiced activities."

Norris, veteran public power advocate, said he doubted Willkie's sincerity in proposing that the Securities and Exchange Commission should arbitrate the price dispute between the authority and the company.

Bankers Held "Hostile"

"There is no possibility of finding any 'yardstick' measure for electrical rates as between the TVA and private utilities, and even persons in the Government are admitting privately that the yardstick theory is being abandoned, Willkie told the committee.

In a period of recess, he also confided to reporters that bankers are decidedly hostile to President Roosevelt's national defense program which calls for expansion of utilities and nationwide integration.

He wound up almost two days of testimony by an appeal to the committee for some permanent formula to be found for taking over private utilities by the Government if Government ownership is to be future Federal policy. Otherwise capital markets will be dislocated in a $12,000,000,000 industry for the whole period of transition, he said. A permanent board might be set up, he suggested, "so fair that no one would raise any question about it."

medicine has extended the life span. They are entitled to greater security."

McNary predicted flatly the President's reorganization bill will not again pass the Senate unless it carries the Wheeler amendment, requiring specific approval of each of the President's reorganization orders by the Senate and House. The Wheeler amendment, vigorously opposed by the Administration, failed last session by only one vote.

Co-operation Pledged

"Government reorganization is highly desirable, and I strongly favor the program if we provide through the Wheeler amendment for affirmative Congressional action on the orders when issued."

He promised Republicon co-operation in efforts to modify the farm act of 1938 to remove control features and "restrictions on farmers." He said he had no objection to soil-conservation objectives, but opposed control of production.

"If the President is right that one-third of our population is ill-fed, ill-clothed and ill-housed, this is no time for scanty production," he said. "If we are given the American market through adequate protection, we can produce in abundance without having a surplus."

McNary said he expected to see a Democratic-sponsored investigation of relief, and declared the public is entitled to know whether relief funds have been used for political purposes. He said he believed Republican and Democratic votes combined will force decentralization of relief and localization of relief administration in the States. He said adequate Federal funds should be appropriated for relief, but predicted a paring of expenditures all along the line, and a sharp revival of budget-balancing sentiment.

Sane Course Needed

"We've got to get away from all this experimentation," he said, "and get back to a sane course in government.

"I expect to see more independent action this session by some who were formerly enamored of the New Deal. The people have spoken against too many left turns. They want to go along a more well-trodden way, still looking into the future and mindful of progress."

McNary's Republican followers in the Senate will number 23 next session, against 15 in the last Congress. It takes more than double that vote for majority action on any measure, but Republicans are counting on additional gains in coalition strength on the Democratic side, resulting directly from the Democratic primary purge split, and the last election's trend of voting. The wily minority leader's strategy apparently will be about the same as it was last session when Republican opposition attacks were soft-pedaled and anti-Administration Democrats permitted to take the lead.

Mass Production Of Planes Possible, Industry Aides Say

By the Associated Press.

Two airplane manufacturers said yesterday that they had told the War Department the American aircraft industry was able and eager to turn out warplanes on a mass production basis.

Donald W. Douglas, president of the Douglas Aircraft Co., said his plants were prepared to fulfill any demand for "volume without waste."

C. F. Egtvedt, president of the Boeing company, said he and other manufacturers had stressed, in conferences with officials, what he said was the ability of the industry to step up output.

Douglas said he had pledged the resources of his Santa Monica (Calif.) plants, which turned out 353 planes the first nine months of this year, to "production without profiteering, and expansion without extravagance."

Virtually no American plant is working at capacity, he said.

Democrats Spent $99,241 in Md.

Baltimore, Nov. 25 (AP).—The Maryland Democratic advisory campaign committee spent $99,241 to elect a United States Senator, six Congressmen and a Governor, Charles B. Alexander, the treasurer, said tonight.

Alexander said a financial report will be made tomorrow showing contributions were received totaling $91,635.35.

Senator Tydings gave $2,500. Governor-elect Herbert R. O'Conor contributed $3,250. Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC, gave $500. Senator George L. Radcliffe contributed $1,000.

Roosevelt Firm Upheld in Fight Over Insurance

Boston, Nov. 25 (AP).—Holding the hope for "favors" had nothing to do with the award of an $850,000 insurance account to a firm with which James Roosevelt was connected, a court-appointed auditor today held that a rival insurance broker had not been "wrongfully deprived" of his commission on the policy.

F. Delano Putnam, the auditor, after five months of study of the evidence, declared Arthur D. Cronin, the broker, was "not entitled to recover" in his suit against the National Shawmut Bank for $31,750, plus interest.

Putnam said "one of the principal reasons" why the bank did not accept Cronin's insurance proposal was because one of its vice presidents, Raymond Ilg, was a "close personal friend of James Roosevelt and had been since the latter's undergraduate days at Harvard."

The Interstate Commerce Commission dismissed yesterday a complaint by Arthur W. Mitchell, colored member of Congress from Illinois, that the Rock Island Railroad required him to leave a Pullman car in Arkansas and travel in a coach inferior to the Pullman.

Commissioners Eastman, Lee, Miller, Atchison and Porter dissented.

Mitchell charged that he was traveling from Chicago to Hot Springs, Ark., on April 20, 1937, and that the conductor on the train required him to change cars when the train entered Arkansas. The railroad declared segregation of races is required by Arkansas law.

The commission held that the railroad was required to obey State law and that therefore "the discrimination and prejudice are plainly not unjust or undue."

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, said yesterday that if Democrats are to win the 1940 Presidential election, they must nominate a candidate "who can harmonize the various factions of the party."

Wheeler, who led the successful fight against the Roosevelt court bill, told reporters that Democrats in the next session of Congress should "get together, correct imperfections that have become manifest in New Deal laws and consolidate their forces.

"The party," he continued, "should go forward with a constructive liberal program.

"If the party is going to be divided and the purges, of the past are to continue, then there will be few Democrats elected in 1940."

Lindley G. Beckworth, 25-year-old east Texas orator, will be the baby of the new Congress and the youngest House member in recent years.

Election of Beckworth and several other relatively youthful newcomers in both houses emphasized what veteran capital employes called a trend toward younger Congressmen.

Browder to Lead 21st Red Rally

Browder, making his first public appearance in Washington, will discuss the recent elections and the international situation. Martin Chancey, Communist Party district secretary, will preside.

As part of the anniversary program, Browder will speak over radio station WOL at 1:15 p. m. Sunday.

Report Shows Business Gains On Wide Front

Steel, Autos in Lead
96% of 1923-25 Figure
Car Loadings Up

By the United Press.

The Federal Reserve Board last night reported that business and industry in the United States advanced on a wide front in the first three weeks of November, with the Nation's two leading industries, steel and automobiles, leading the parade.

The board, which issues monthly analyses of industrial and commercial conditions, found that employment and national income continued to surge forward from the depths of the recession. It made no prediction, however, that improvement would continue.

The report related that the board's seasonably adjusted index of industrial production was at 96 per cent of the 1923-25 average, against 90 per cent in September. Steel ingot production increased considerably, averaging 53 per cent of capacity in October, and rising further in the first three weeks of the current month. Automobile production soared to meet increased demand and was nearly at the same rate as in the corresponding period in other recent years, although disappointingly low levels were touched in the first nine months of 1938.

Construction Gains

The board found considerable improvement was registered in construction contracts, partly occasioned by hospital, educational and other public building included in the Public Works Administration recovery drive.

Mine, railroad and automobile employment increased between the middle of September and October, the board reported. Most durable goods industries absorbed new workers, and the construction industry participated in the improvement.

Freight car loadings rose considerably in October, owing to increased shipments of grains, coal and miscellaneous freight.

Total loans and investments at Federal Reserve member banks declined by $150,000,000 according to the report. The slump was almost entirely in New York City banks, and reflected retirement of State and local Government securities.

Prices Unchanged

On the other side of the picture, the board found that wholesale commodity prices showed little change; department and variety store sales showed less than usual seasonal increase in October "partly because consumer buying of winter merchandise was retarded by unseasonably warm weather during most of the month." Employment in the canning industry declined and general increase in trade was less than seasonal.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department reported that the United States enjoyed a $960,131,000 favorable balance of foreign trade in the first ten months of the year despite a sharp drop in exports and imports marked up in 1937.

The report showed that exports totaled $2,378,045,000, drop of $138,022,000 below the same period in 1937, while imports aggregated $1,612,914,000, a slump of $1,038,831,000.

By the Associated Press.

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 25.—President Roosevelt pointed with gratitude yesterday to improved business and employment conditions, but warned that relief rolls might continue high for some time.

Asked about Labor Department reports of increased private employment and pay rolls, the President told a roadside press conference there was no question that business and job-giving had picked up. But, he added, this did not necessarily mean relief rolls would show a corresponding drop immediately.

Mr. Roosevelt would make no further comment on the Jewish refugee question. Hugh R. Wilson, Ambassador to Berlin, will be here Sunday or Monday to talk about the German situation, he said.

This afternoon the President drove 25 miles to make his annual visit to the Pine Mountain Valley resettlement project.

Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, held an after-dinner conference at the presidential cottage.

It was not announced what the talk was about, but observers recalled Eccles recently was named on a Roosevelt advisory board to study national production and income with a view to a better timing of Government spending.

James H. Cromwell, of New York, husband of Doris Duke, the tobacco heiress, was another late arrival at Warm Springs. It was announced he would see the President tomorrow.

Hazen to Ask States' Aid in Numbers War

Plans Md.-Va. Parley
Would Abolish 'Line'
Police Could Cross It

Commissioner Hazen yesterday voiced strong resentment against numbers racketeers and said he has planned a tri-State "good neighbor" conference with Maryland and Virginia police authorities to consider a plan which would "strike at the root of the racket."

The proposal would enable local police to enter Maryland or Virginia in pursuit of numbers racketeers. Hazen explained it would be necessary that the nearby States deputize the local police so they could make arrests.

"It has been brought to my attention that many of the so-called local numbers barons have hideaways in nearby States, and that every time our police chase them they fail because they are powerless to make arrests once the racketeer crosses the State line," Hazen declared.

Will Continue Fight

The Commissioner said he would continue fighting the racketeers until "the last one is driven from the city."

"We have the law to convict them and we will in the very near future," he stated.

At the same time Hazen said he would discuss with the State authorities a plan suggested recently by a Maryland justice of the peace which would enable an arrested traffic violator who did not have collateral immediately available to deposit his driver's permit. Relationships between the States would be reciprocal.

Temporary Permit

The plan proposed by Robert Ennis, the justice of the peace, was supported yesterday by the traffic committee of the Board of Trade. Anyone arrested on a traffic charge involving less than $50 in collateral would forfeit his permit and be given a temporary permit good for 24 hours, in which time the driver could return with the collateral.

Hazen said he would ask the advice of Corporation Counsel Seal, Police Chief Brown and Traffic Director Van Duzer before calling the conference.

Maritime Board Gets Bids on 3 Diesel Vessels

By the Associated Press.

The Maritime Commission announced yesterday that three shipyards had submitted bids for the construction of Diesel-propelled cargo vessels.

The vessels, which will have a speed of 16½ knots, will be built to a design known officially as the C-3, and will cost in the neighborhood of $3,000,000 each.

The commission announced earlier this week award of a contract for six steam-propelled C-3 cargo vessels. This brought to 43 the number of ships the commission has placed under contract. Aggregate cost of the vessels is about $1,250,000,000.

The commission has not announced how many ships it intends to build from the bids now on file, but officials have predicted a total of more than 50 would be under contract by the end of this year.

Bids received yesterday were submitted by the Bethlehem Steel Co., New York; the Sun Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., Chester, Pa., and the Ingalls Iron Works Co., Inc., Birmingham, Ala.

Ohio Wins Pension Restoration Review

By the Associated Press.

The Social Security Board announced yesterday it had informed Governor-Elect John W. Bricker of Ohio that it would consider at a meeting of the full board his request for restoration of Federal old-age pension grants to the State.

The board said he made the request in a telegram sent yesterday from his home in Cincinnati. The reply did not state when the board meeting would be held.

The board has suspended grants to Ohio, demanding a reorganization of the State Division of Aid for the Aged.

23 Billions in 148 Years to Veterans

By the Associated Press.

Officials of the Veterans' Administration estimated yesterday that former soldiers and their dependents have cost the Government nearly $23,000,000,000 since 1790.

Officials figured that World War veterans and their dependents alone had received $3,635,275,865, in addition to $3,734,101,268 in bonus payments.

More than $1,000 former soldiers were in hospitals September 30, the agency said, and 15,010 more were living in veterans' homes.

Trade Board Group Indorses Safety Awards

Taxi Driver Speaks
Assails Congestion
Would Cut Out Cruising

By Howard R. Wentworth.

After indorsing The Washington Post-Metropolitan Police program of rewarding motorists for safe and courteous driving, the Board of Trade traffic committee yesterday heard a District taxi driver blame congestion and lack of uniform regulations for the city's traffic accidents.

Col. L. C. Crawford, chairman, called for committee approval of the safe-driving award system. By providing such recognition, Col. Crawford said, Washington's chances of winning public support to curb casualties will be greatly increased.

Certificates of "service to the public safety," offered by the Life Underwriters Association, are presented by Policeman George M. Patton, the District's "safety officer," who is on city-wide patrol duty.

Taxi Driver Assails Cruising

At yesterday's meeting, Henry Boes, a driver for the City Cab Co., discussed local traffic conditions from the viewpoint of a taxi driver. He attributed a large percentage of downtown traffic congestion to taxicabs and advocated elimination of all cruising.

Boes proposed that the number of taxis be decreased and cab stands be established at convenient locations.

"There is probably no better judge of traffic conditions than the average taxi driver," Boes said, "and I believe there is no safer type of driver on the streets. The cab driver must be cautious—safety is his working capital."

He contended also that conflicting signs and bewildering traffic signals hamper safety promotion.

Committeemen Laugh

Drawing repeated laughs by reciting humorous incidents in the life of a taxi driver, Boes said he was opposed to any increase in cab fares, contending such an increase would reduce the number of passengers.

The city was told that the board of directors of the Board of Trade had approved recent proposals for reorganization of the Traffic Advisory Council to provide a paid executive officer, the establishment of pedestrian control with authority for police to make arrests, and a parking ban on streets adjacent to playgrounds.

The city's new parking meters drew praise from members of the committee, who said that "for the first time" ample parking facilities are available in the downtown area.

Hazen Opens Parking Center

Meanwhile, yesterday, Commissioner Hazen officially opened a four-story parking center near Nineteenth and I streets northwest, which will provide parking for 350 cars. The building was erected by the Columbia Operating Co. for those who visit medical buildings in the block.

The ceremonies were attended by Dr. Charles Stanley White, president of the operating group; Dr. Oscar B. Hunter, Dr. R. K. Thompson and Dr. Allen Chenery.

Following an inspection of the building, Commissioner Hazen said: "This is the answer to our parking problem. If we had more off-street parking facilities like this, our traffic congestion would disappear."

Supervisory Unit Named for Radio

Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, yesterday announced appointment of a committee to "recommend procedures leading to self-imposed regulation of American radio and development of program standards for the broadcasting industry under N. A. B. jurisdiction."

His action, regarded as one of the most forward-looking moves in the industry since the former mayor of Louisville became head of the association, is in line with recent discussions among radio executives.

Members of the committee are Miller, chairman, Edward Klauber, executive vice president of the Columbia Broadcasting System; Lenox R. Lohr, president of the National Broadcasting Co.; Theodore Streibert, vice president of the Mutual Broadcasting System, and, representing the "independents," Paul Morency, Hartford, Conn.; Edgar Bill, Peoria, Ill., and Ed Craney, Butte, Mont.

The group will hold its first meeting in New York December 5 and final recommendations are scheduled to be presented to the association's board of directors meeting here December 12 and 13.

Robber Is Found Guilty After Debutante Tells Montgomery Court of Flight in Woods

Cars Collided First
He Refused $1 Offer
Then She Ran Away

HELEN V. KIENDL

Edward Jackson, colored, Washington delivery man, early today was found guilty of robbery, after an attractive 18-year-old debutante told a Montgomery County jury at Rockville he chased her while she was playing hookey from the fashionable Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, N. Y. Sentence will be given today or Monday.

The girl, Miss Helen Kiendl, daughter of a law partner of John W. Davis, said that Jackson demanded she pay him damages for bumping the fender of his machine.

When he refused her offer of $1, she said she abandoned her handbag in the back seat of the car and fled through the woods to the home of Mrs. Thelma Lee, who called police.

Defense Attorneys Joseph B. Simpson, jr., and his sister, Miss Vivian Simpson, attempted to prove "duress" in obtaining confessions from Jackson April 5, the day of the alleged robbery.

Montgomery County police denied on the stand that any threats had been employed, claiming that Jackson's second confession was signed because "he changed his story slightly" after the first statement.

Later Jackson corroborated Miss Kiendl's story, adding that after the girl fled he noticed her pocketbook lying on the ground, and took out some money. He said he remained at the scene about half an hour, and then, as he saw the police car coming, jumped in his car and fled, until a bullet whistled past his head and he crashed into a tree.

The jury hearing the case selected John H. Holsey, colored, as its foreman.

Munter, Darr Nominated to Head D. C. Bar

Election in January
Merrick, Wilkes Named
Also Austin and Ballard

Godfrey L. Munter, born in Switzerland, and Sefton Darr, native Washingtonian, have been nominated for presidency of the District Bar Association.

The list of candidates selected by the nominating committee is posted today for election at the January meeting of the association.

Munter is present president of the association, having been elevated from the first vice presidency when Bolitha J. Laws resigned to accept a seat on the United States District Court bench.

Darr has been an active member of the association for many years. He is a former director and was chairman of the small claims committee which advocated and secured a small claims court for the District.

Two men nominated by the committee for first vice president are Richard L. Merrick, chairman of the committee on unauthorized practice, and James C. Wilkes, a former assistant corporation counsel and director of the association. One is to be elected.

The three members nominated for second vice president are all younger members of the bar. They are Philip W. Austin, Frederick A. Ballard and Bernard G. Ostmann. One will be elected.

Wilbur L. Gray, secretary for the past two terms, and Francis W. Hill, jr., treasurer for the past term, were nominated to run without opposition for one more term of a year.

Nine prominent members of the bar were nominated for three vacancies on the board of directors. They are William H. Collins, a former assistant District attorney; William A. Gallagher, editor of the District Bar Association Journal; Charles D. Hamel, former member of the Board of Tax Appeals, and David A. Hart, assistant District attorney.

Also Charles V. Imlay, former dean of Southeastern University Law School; P. H. Marshall, former assistant corporation counsel; Kenneth N. Parkinson, former member of the Boxing Commission; E. Barrett Prettyman, former corporation counsel and chief counsel of Bureau of Internal Revenue, and Harry S. Wender.

Ice and Snow Emphasize Chest Pleas

Workers Brave Cold
Face $320,000 Deficit
Princess Gives $4,000

Subfreezing temperature, intensifying the hardships of thousands of the city's needy and emphasizing the importance of the Community Chest, yesterday gave impetus to the efforts of volunteer solicitors to meet the $320,000 deficit facing the Chest for 1939.

Volunteers, tramping through icy streets, stressed in their appeals the danger in curtailment of the program of various settlement houses, where children escape from poorly heated homes to cheerful warmth, or any decrease in the supply of winter clothing, shoes and overshoes for the underprivileged.

Detailed returns were not available from yesterday's solicitation, and Chest officials announced that further figures would not be released until after the final campaign audit December 1.

It was disclosed, however that a $4,000 pledge had been cabled by Princess Boncompagni, formerly Margaret D. Draper, daughter of the late Gen. William F. Draper, who was at one time Ambassador to Italy.

At the close of the official campaigning period Wednesday, pledges totaled $1,807,000, with the quota set at $2,127,000.

"Responsibility for the unmet portion of the Chest goal rests with those Washington residents who have not yet made their contributions," Herbert L. Willett, jr., Chest director, said yesterday.

"Unless Washington givers dig down for at least $193,000 more than has at present been contributed, the extent to which human needs are met through Chest agencies must be cut down under the level that was possible with the sums budgeted to agencies during the past year," he declared.

Hopkins Demands N.Y. Times Reveal Quotation Source

Works Progress Administrator Hopkins last night demanded, as a public "right," that the New York Times ascertain and reveal the source of remarks, "we will spend and spend, tax and tax, elect and elect," attributed to him by Arthur Krock, chief of the Times' Washington bureau. The demand was made in Hopkins' second letter to the Times on the subject.

Meanwhile, Krock amplified a reply he made to Hopkins' first letter. He declared that before he ever referred to the WPA chief's supposed remarks, he had seen them printed "in many other newspapers" without having seen any denial by Hopkins, and that he had accepted absence of denial as admission of accuracy of the quotation "as a crystallization of his political philosophy."

Krock said he had "substantially" verified the quotation from a man "of excellent repute and not at all hard of hearing," whose identity he had in confidence, which he would maintain "unless I am released."

In his second letter to the Times, Hopkins said: "Public officials expect to be criticized by newspaper columnists. But I am astounded that a columnist for the New York Times should stoop to the level where he employs his column in much the same way that opposition politicians deliver themselves on stump speeches."

Foiled Yegg Turns Wit; Tries to Palm Off Job on Sniper

A burglar with a sense of humor attempted to crack a safe yesterday in the office of the Asbury M. E. Church, at Eleventh and K streets northwest, and when his efforts failed he scratched "sniper," on the safe door. The attempted robbery was reported by the Rev. George W. Boone, pastor. He said that nothing of value was taken.

Meanwhile, investigation of the real sniper was practically at a standstill. Several persons telephoned police that they believed they had seen the madman, but detectives were unable to connect the leads with the case, Lieut. George Darnell, chief of the homicide squad, declared.

Virginian Released To Wait Hearing In Soldier's Death

Henry Douglas Trammel, jr., who has been held in the Arlington County Jail without charge in the death of Private Guy Keeler, of Fort Myer, was released yesterday in the custody of his attorney, former Commonwealth Attorney William C. Gloth.

At the request of Commonwealth Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas, Judge B. M. Hedrick of the Arlington County Trial Court postponed the case until December 5. Douglas gave the reason for his request as the absence of certain witnesses.

Keeler was was found unconscious behind the Fort Myer Hospital Sunday. He died Monday night in Walter Reed Hospital from a fractured skull. Funeral services were held yesterday at the Fort Myer Chapel.

Christian Powers Urged by Senator King to Aid Jews

A call for the "Christian and democratic" nations of the world to unite in solving the Jewish problem was voiced last night by Senator King of Utah speaking to the congregation of Beth Sholom Synagogue here.

"Our Government," he said, "should do all it can. If it is necessary we should make appropriations to preserve and settle the Jews if Hitler continues his persecutions."

He, King, attacked the Munich pact, saying, "Great Britain and France committed a great mistake in not putting up a bold front against the demands of Hitler."

Cardinal Pacelli To Rule Church If Pius Dies

Talked Of for Successor Has Visited Capital Schooled in Diplomacy

By Edward T. Folliard

Should the bells of St. Peter's signal the death of Pius XI, Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, 6-foot prince of the church who visited Washington in 1936, would become a sort of temporary Pope, according to ecclesiastic authorities here.

Now secretary of state for the Vatican, Cardinal Pacelli would drop that post to become "Camerlengo" of the Holy Roman Church—the supreme head of the apostolic chamber or temporary administrator of Vatican affairs. He would continue in this role until the College of Cardinals met in 15 days to elect a successor to Pope Pius, the spiritual leader of 331,000,000 Catholics.

Discussed as Successor

The name of Cardinal Pacelli frequently has figured in speculation over Pius' successor. A Roman by birth, widely traveled and thoroughly schooled in diplomacy, he is regarded as one of the most brilliant figures in the church. But speculation over the election of a Pope always has been risky, a fact which lay journalists discovered on February 6, 1922, when scholarly Cardinal Ratti was chosen. Little had been said in advance about Cardinal Ratti, who, as Pius XI, was to become one of the greatest of the Popes.

One of the first reforms ordered by Pope Pius showed his solicitude for the Western Hemisphere. For centuries, ever since the Second Council of Lyons under Gregory X (1274), the cardinals were required to gather ten days after the Pope's decease and elect a successor. This made it almost impossible for the cardinals in the United States, Canada and Argentina to reach Rome in time to vote.

Time Limit Extended

Cardinal O'Connell, of Boston, traveled to Rome as swiftly as possible in 1922, but even so he was too late to cast his vote. The new Pope, in receiving him, expressed his sorrow, and promised to make a change in the time limit. This he ultimately did, extending the period to 15 days.

Cardinal Pacelli, a tall, slender man, with silver-rimmed spectacles and an ascetic face, came to Washington in mid-October, 1936. Something of a globe-trotter—he had been to South America two years before—he said that he was merely on a vacation, but many attached significance to his visit.

It was reported, for example, that he came over to "discipline" the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, who had been making intemperate criticisms of President Roosevelt. Later, Father Coughlin was disciplined, but not by Cardinal Pacelli.

Toured the Capital

In the 24 hours he was here Cardinal Pacelli, highest-ranking dignitary of the Catholic Church ever to visit America, moved around like a whirlwind. He journeyed to Mount Vernon, he went to the Congressional Library, to Catholic University, Georgetown University, the Convent of the Sacred Heart and to the National Press Club.

The lean, red-hatted cardinal faced some 400 newspapermen at the Press Club. Speaking in English, one of several languages of which he is a master, he talked about world peace.

"Glory belongs not only to those who triumph on the battlefields," he said, "but even more to those who safeguard and foster public tranquillity and peace.

"The Catholic Church and its august head desire greatly the protection of the peace—social peace and peace among the nations. The daily prayer of the Holy Father is for the peace and prosperity of the world—a prayer in which I invite all of you to join."

Given Football Yell

At Georgetown University, where he granted a holiday and was given the school's football yell of "Hoya, hoya, saxa," Cardinal Pacelli said there was no conflict between science and religion, the natural and the supernatural.

"And," he added, "there should be no conflict between love of God and love of country."

President Roosevelt was not in the city when Cardinal Pacelli came here. Leaving here, the Pope's "prime minister" went to Long Island. Then he made an air tour which took him to the Pacific Coast and back in six days. On November 5, just after the 1936 election, he had luncheon with President Roosevelt at Hyde Park. Two days later he sailed for home.

Arms Embargo

If you want to know whether U. S. voters agree with Secretary Hull's decision not to send arms to China you should have read the Gallup Poll in The Post on February 18.

'Too Nice to Kill,' Dogs Freed

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Tiny and Lady, two black Great Dane dogs, were free at Frankfort, Ky., yesterday after Mrs. Charles F. Wright, shown with the dogs, withdrew her complaint that the dogs had killed a prize turkey, when the owners agreed to pay for the gobbler. The dogs were "too nice to kill," Mrs. Wright said. and digitalis to rally the Pope's weakened heart.

Leaving the bedside, Dr. Milani said has patient was "slightly better" and had been able to swallow some broth.

"I am optimistic, but all depends on the resistance of the Holy Father's heart," he said.

Another such heart attack might be fatal, the physician said.

The two men who would give absolution and administer extreme unction if the Pope were dying went to his apartment.

Cardinal Lauri Calls

Lorenzo Cardinal Lauri, grand penitentiary of the church, or the cardinal who sets penances for sins, called shortly after the Pope had been given emergency treatment. It would be Cardinal Lauri's office to read a profession of faith to the Holy Father and give him absolution on the approach of death.

He also would be among those present at the administration of extreme unction. The cardinal remained with the Pope about an hour.

The Pontiff's sacristan, Mgr. Alfonso Camillo de Romanis, spent two hours in the apartment this afternoon.

Vatican attendants said the Pope talked cheerfully with his doctors in the afternoon. They said he was attended only by his two male nurses from 4:15 p. m., when Dr. Milani left the bedroom, until 7:05 p. m., when the physician returned.

The Pope was said by the private sources to have rallied until 8 p. m., when he was said to have grown worse.

His physicians were reported to have left off injections of digitalis and adrenalin, leaving the Pope to rally by his own forces.

Vatican sources said the Pope's mind remained active most of the time. They quoted him as greeting a physician tonight with this remark:

"Do not think of me. Too many others are suffering today. May God help them all and bring peace to them all."

Reichelderfer made a round-trip from Lakehurst, N. J., to Germany aboard the ill-fated dirigible, Hindenburg, as an official naval observer. His analysis of the "weather handling" of the dirigible is believed to have been of considerable importance in the Navy's decision to sponsor construction of a new lighter-than-aircraft to replace the Macon and Akron.

Born in Harlan, Ind., August 9, 1896, he was graduated from Northwestern University in 1917. After entering the Navy the following year he attended the aviation ground school course at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Upon completing his work there, he was assigned to aerological work at the Naval Air Station, Sydney, Nova Scotia.

Commander, Reichelderfer was sent to Libson, Portugal, in connection with the transatlantic flight in 1919 of the N C-4 and after completing the training course at Pensacola, Fla., was designated naval aviator of heavier-than-aircraft the same year. He was named a naval aviator for dirigible work in 1931.

After service in the Bureau of Aeronautics and aboard the cruiser Los Angeles, he made a European meteorological tour as part of his study of world weather conditions and then returned to the National Capital for another tour of duty with the Bureau of Aeronautics.

Pius Described As Sacrifice To World Peace

Father Sheen Gives Talk Cites War Opposition 'Woes' Broke His Heart

During a program of the Catholic Hour, broadcast from Washington last night over a coast-to-coast hookup, the Right Rev. Mgr. Fulton J. Sheen, of Catholic University, gave a human interest glimpse into the life of Pope Pius XI.

Mgr. Sheen said:

"Our Holy Father, Pius XI, Vicar of Christ, 261st successor of St. Peter, is seriously ill in Rome.

"Old age has broken his body; the woes of the world have broken his heart. His spirit, which alone is unbreakable, is hovering like a flame between the earth which feeds it and heaven which summons it.

"Whether that great flame which has illumined a world is now to join the Light of the World Whose Vicar he is, lies hidden in the inscrutable designs of Providence.

"Inspired by the Master who did not have His life taken away, but laid it down of Himself, he too offered himself as a holocaust for world peace.

"Two months ago, as the nations of the world rattled their sabers and moved their battering rams and long range guns to once more turn poppy fields into Haceldemas of blood, this venerable Pontiff, in an international broadcast, offered his life for the peace of the world, if the Lord of life and death would choose to take it.

"The swords that were drawn are now sheathed, but the Price is in danger of being paid.

"Like Abraham who offered his son, he offered his life, and now as death hovers near, we look, like other Abrahams, for an angel of deliverance."

Sharp Output Rise Reported by Reserve

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserves Board reported yesterday that industrial production continued to increase "sharply" in October and the first three weeks of November.

The board estimated October production at 96 per cent of the 1923-25 average, compared with 90 in September, 76 at the recession low in May, and 102 in October, 1937. Although the board has not announced its index figure for November, it has been said unofficially that the November index probably would be about 100—the highest since October, 1937.

Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts told a conference of 18 circuit court and district judges, held at Atlantic City yesterday, that such legislation was contemplated.

Nation's Toll Is 81

By the Associated Press.

The death toll of the first savage cold wave of the winter—the most severe Thanksgiving weather in many years—stood last night at approximately 81 for the Nation.

New York counted 22 dead, New England, 20; New Jersey, 8, and Pennsylvania, 11. Continued cold was the prospect tonight, and a large area of the United States still lay under a blanket of snow.

Thousands of men worked at clearing New York streets from the heaviest snowfall in November since the Weather Bureau records began in 1871. Nearly 2,000 pieces of motorized equipment were in use.

Snow covered Atlantic City's boardwalk, and in some New Jersey cities it was heavier than last winter's total snowfall.

Pennsylvania lay under 4 to 12 inches of snow, a record for November; western Maryland under 12 inches, and Baltimore under 10—the heaviest for November in 67 years.

Commissioners Refuse to Act On Cherry Trees

The District Commissioners yesterday washed their hands of the cherry tree situation. In a letter to the Federation of Women's Clubs they said "it is a matter over which the Commissioners have no jurisdiction."

The letter, addressed to Mrs. Ernest H. Daniel, federation president, was in reply to a letter from the federation requesting court action to prevent "destruction of the trees."

In addition the Federation, in a resolution signed by many prominent club women, urged the Commissioners to act.

skidding accidents brought four deaths in Maryland.

The dead:

Nena Harrell, colored, 60, of 400 M street northwest, killed when the car in which she was riding skidded into a truck near Laurel, Md.

An unidentified colored man, found in a snowdrift in Baltimore.

Henry Joynes, of Accomac, Va., struck by another car when he stopped to clear the snow from his windshield near Pocomoke City.

Alvin Merritt, 16, en route to spend Thanksgiving with his mother whom he had not seen in four years, killed when his car overturned on a curve.

Although major roads leading out of Washington were passable, the trip to Baltimore took nearly four hours, according to the Maryland Roads Commission.

New hazards were reported last night as the ice and snow, melted to slush and water by yesterday's sun, froze on sidewalks and streets.

Caught unawares by the sudden storm, District residents flooded emergency agencies with calls for aid long after the blizzard had abated. The American Automobile Association reported that more than 2,000 calls for help were handled between 4 p. m. Thursday and 10 a. m. yesterday.

On the basis of telephoned and telegraphed reports, the A.A.A. said, the storm center covered a 700-mile area from New England to the Virginia-North Carolina line.

It was estimated yesterday that the job of "digging out" would cost the District $10,000. An army of workers was mobilized before dawn and more than 800 men went to work clearing the streets. Although calls for extra men went to every part of the city, William Xanden, in charge of operations, said that few workers reported for the jobs.

Parking regulations meant nothing. Until late yesterday, stranded cars could be seen on the wrong sides of streets, at right angles to the curb, and many were abandoned with smashed fenders and radiators. Authorities lamented the fact that Washington's "snow parking" ban doesn't become effective until December 15.

Fifty-one snow plows were pressed into service to make streets passable for the throng of Government workers reporting for duty yesterday. The Capital Transit Co. employed 22 plows and had nearly 300 men cleaning switches and scraping ice from the tracks. Two hundred trucks were used to cart snow from 250 miles of sidewalks.

Throughout the heaviest part of the storm period—from 9 p. m. Thursday until 7 a. m., yesterday—the temperature remained at 24 degrees, the Weather Bureau reported.

A Baltimore & Ohio train was derailed early yesterday when a truck stalled on a grade-crossing at Westmore, Md.—near Rockville. No one was injured.

Blake Merson, of Bethesda, driver of a Montgomery County welfare truck, said he was blinded by the swirling snow and missed the crossing. Although he attempted to flag the approaching train the engineer failed to see his signals and the truck was struck broadside and carried a mile down the tracks. The engine and one car were derailed.

Additional injuries from skidding accidents and falls reported yesterday were:

Loretta Bolding, 42, of 2929 Connecticut avenue northwest, suffered a dislocated shoulder when she slipped and fell in front of the Treasury Department. She was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Caroline Kline, 62, of 931 G street northwest, slipped near her home and received a fractured ankle. She was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Jessie Thomas, colored, 38, of 2609 P street northwest, was taken to Georgetown Hospital with a fractured arm after she fell in front of her home.

Leonard Dowrick, 33, of 3314 Fourteenth street northwest, escaped serious injury when his car skidded into a fire plug on East Executive avenue. The fireplug was uprooted.

A snowball hurled by an unidentified youth struck Charles Jubrer, 27, of New York City, in the face. He was treated at Emergency Hospital for lacerations.

New U.S. Note Sent Reich on Austria's Debt

Nazis Deny Obligation
Hull Makes Quick Reply
No Intention of Yielding

By the Associated Press.

A new note in which the United States is believed to have insisted that Germany is responsible for Austria's debts went to Berlin yesterday.

It was a quick reply to a communication in which the Reich is understood to have taken the position that she had no legal obligation to assume the debts.

Yesterday's communication was sent without even awaiting the arrival of Ambassador Hugh Wilson, who is coming back from Berlin with a comprehensive report on the situation in Germany.

The action called renewed attention to one of the differences between the two governments, whose relations have suffered such a critical strain that both have called their ambassadors home.

Hull Going to Peru

The note was approved by Secretary of State Hull in one of his last official acts before departing for New York en route to the Pan-American conference at Lima, Peru. It answers a German note of November 17 relative to American insistence that Germany assume Austrian indebtedness outstanding in this country when Austria disappeared into the German state last March.

The new American communication was not made public immediately, but informed persons considered it unlikely that the United States had receded from its position that Germany's disclaimer of responsibility was unsound.

In an earlier communication, the American Government insisted that "in case of absorption of a state the substituted sovereignty assumes the debts and obligations of the absorbed state and takes the burdens with the benefits."

War Famine Debt Owed

The debt includes $24,055,708 advanced to Austria to feed war victims in 1920, about $20,000,000 borrowed by the Austrian government here in 1930, and certain municipal and other bonds held privately here.

Another development with some bearing on German-American relations occurred yesterday when President Roosevelt formally proclaimed new trade treaties with Great Britain and Canada. The President, as is usual, called attention to the fact that Germany is on the American trade blacklist.

"Because I find as a fact that the treatment of American commerce by Germany is discriminatory, I direct that such proclaimed duties (contained in the new treaties) shall not be applied to products of Germany," Mr. Roosevelt said in a letter to Secretary Morgenthau, who is responsible for customs collections.

All other nations will share in the benefits of the new treaties under unconditional "most favored nation" treatment.

French General Strike Called; Daladier to Take Over Industry

French

assure operation of all the nation's public services on Wednesday, the day of the general strike.

Confers With General

Moving hurriedly after issuance of the strike call, Daladier conferred with the military governor of Paris, Gen. Victor Bourret; the Paris prefect of police, Roger Langeron, and with Gen. Jules Decamp, director of his military staff in the ministry of national defense and war.

The National Federation of Railroad Workers already had announced its workers would join the general strike. Daladier's conference, however, indicated he plans to mobilize all railroad workers and send them to work as soldiers instead of as paid employes in order to keep the railroads running.

Employes of the Paris subway and bus lines also are affiliated with the General Confederation of Labor. They, too, may be mobilized and sent back to work if they strike.

Army May Be Called

Some sources indicated the regular army might be called upon to operate some of the public services. At Anzin mines near Valenciennes, in what may prove to be a test cast in the north of France, the army has showed its strength against strikers for a general strike.

Railroad workers of a little spur line from the mines to the main line went on strike. The Government yesterday requisitioned the railroad line and mobilized 400 of 2,000 workers into the army.

In the morning the 400 refused to work, saying the papers calling them into the army were not correctly drawn, but by afternoon all were busy.

Military Court Set Up

At Valenciennes the army established a military court and the officers let it be known all mobilized workers who refused to tend their jobs would be tried for desertion or insubordination by military courts.

As soldiers, they would be liable for long prison terms if found guilty of such offenses.

Issuance of the decree tonight showed, spokesmen said, the premier was determined to remain in power and to maintain order.

During the day the premier used armed mobile guards and police to eject sit-in strikers from factories both in the north and in the Paris region. He was determined to enforce his decree laws, the immediate cause of the internal crisis.

Resignation Demanded

Cries of "Daladier to the gallows" rang out in a demonstration of several thousand workers in the capital's North Station this evening shortly after the Socialist deputies of the chamber—the largest single group of the lower house—called for the premier's immediate resignation.

This action and the general strike call constituted two blows which, if Daladier should decide to try to remain in power, will force him to depend upon rightists for the life of his government.

In the suburbs of Paris 50,000 strikers were ousted from factories echoing to the tramp of mobile guard patrols.

Nearly 400 more were under arrest in the Paris region either for participating in clashes with the police in the strike zones or for the demonstration at the North Station, where crowds of commuting workers were bitter in their yells for the premier's resignation.

There were many brief clashes in northern France, where construction and railroad workers, miners and workers in other branches of organized labor joined 50,000 already striking in metal factories and mines near Valenciennes.

ditions of exodus from that country by "conditions of orderly emigration."

He added, however, if such cooperation could not be obtained from the Hitler regime, "we must redouble our efforts to solve the problem without it."

In outspoken words Taylor remarked the victims of recent developments in Germany included not only Jews but Catholics and Protestants as well who "are all alike in that they feel it is no longer possible for them to think their own thoughts, to express their own feelings or to worship God according to their own consciences."

Recent developments he admitted were "dimming our hopes of improving the condition of these people within Germany sufficiently to provide orderly emigration over a period of years, and they are correspondingly increasing the urgency of finding opportunities for refuge and settlement with the least possible delay."

But, he added, rather than "flood" any country with the emigrants the intergovernmental committee's program was based on the existing immigration laws of all the countries concerned.

"All of us," he remarked in one passage, "hold very little ill will, but hope for a revival of Germany as a member of the more advanced countries."

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Nov. 25.—There were approximately 500 refugees from Germany among the 883 passengers arriving today on the United States liner Manhattan. It was one of the largest refugee groups arriving on one liner in recent months.

For several hours last night the pier was filled with the luggage and huge crates containing the household effects of the refugees, who arrived under the immigration quota to take up permanent residence in this country.

Chiang to Meet Envoys of U. S., France

Warns the British Asks Immediate Aid
Cites Fall of Canton

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Nov. 25.—Gen. Chiang Kai-shek was reported tonight to be planning a frank review of relations between China and the United States and France to follow up a showdown talk with British Ambassador Sir Archibald Kerr.

In a conference "somewhere in Hunan Province," Chiang was said to have delivered to Britain a tacit warning that unless British help were forthcoming China would be forced to turn elsewhere.

In that event, reliable Chinese sources represented Chiang as saying British dominance in the still unconquered parts of China would fade and the nation that provided the needed help would win Britain's place.

Kuomintang Session

Sir Archibald arrived in Shanghai today, but would say only that he had found the general "well, fit and optimistic."

The Kuomintang (Chinese government party) was scheduled to open an important session at Chungking, provisional capital, early next month, in which China's foreign relations will be debated and her diplomatic course set.

Chiang was reported to have decided on immediate conferences with United States Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson and the French envoy. The American and French embassies are at Chungking.

The general also was reported to have told Sir Archibald that the fall of Canton October 21 was largely the result of China's belief that Britain would intervene in any Japanese threat to south China.

Hankow, Nov. 25 (AP).—The old five-barred Chinese flag, first displayed in 1911 when the republic succeeded the Manchu dynasty, was hoisted here today by the Japanese under the muzzles of machine-guns.

The flag-raising heralded formation of the so-called Chinese "peace maintenance commission," which was seen as the first step toward establishing a Japanese-dominated government here as at Nanking and Peiping. Hankow capitulated October 26.

Text of Hull's Statement

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 25.—Following is text of Secretary Hull's statement, given as he departed for the Pan-American conference at Lima, Peru:

The delegation of the United States sails to take part in the eighth international conference of American states at Lima at a time when a friendly and dispassionate approach to international problems is essential.

In its invitation to participate in the conference, the government of Peru commented upon the grave problems which are disturbing the world today and which are compromising its security. It observed that the situation requires the nations of America to strengthen their traditional ties and endeavor to create new bonds of solidarity which would serve to eliminate the danger of war among themselves and to safeguard them from the propagation on their soil of extra-continental disputes.

"Solid Cause for Hope"

The government of the United States will strongly support at the coming conference every effort designed so to strengthen these traditional ties among the American peoples and their governments. It will heartily favor all measures for their mutual benefit.

The continued loyal observance of the American system of consultation and co-operation, the utilization of our inter-American peace machinery, and the support of our principles of the peaceful settlement of international disputes will be most constructive factors in the solution of world problems today. The encouraging developments in many phases of inter-American relations during the two years which have elapsed since the inter-American conference for the maintenance of peace met at Buenos Aires gives us every reason to hope for further effective progress at Lima.

The mere fact that the representatives of twenty-one nations can meet to discuss their problems in a spirit of trust, understanding, and tolerance is a solid cause for hope in a world threatened today with despair. This approach to international relations strengthens our faith in the eventual triumph of integrity, justice, respect for order based on law, and recognition of the essential dignity and worth of the human spirit and mind.

Spirit, "Give and Take"

I personally am anticipating the opportunity to work again with my friends of the other American republics, as I have had the pleasure of doing at two previous conferences, to forward our program of elaborating measures of mutual benefit and of advantage for the welfare of the American peoples.

Our country happily maintains cordial and friendly relations with all of the other American nations. Our representatives will meet the delegates from the other American republics in a spirit of sympathetic give and take. While naturally giving every attention to the interests of the United States, they will work on the principle that what is for the good of all is to the advantage of each.

The evidence of public interest in the conference at Lima is most encouraging. I do not believe that too much emphasis can be placed upon the great moral forces exerted in international affairs by an alert and informed public opinion.

I am confident that the work accomplished and the measures agreed upon at Lima will commend themselves to the thoughtful attention and the support of all of the American peoples. It is only with this thought and support that a comprehensive program of inter-American friendship and co-operation can be carried out.

Chamberlain Back, Cheerful on Talks

Special Cable to The Post.

London, Nov. 25.—Radiating an optimism that was not shared in informed private quarters, Prime Minister Chamberlain and his foreign secretary, Viscount Halifax, returned to London tonight from Paris.

"It was a very useful visit," said Chamberlain, referring to his talks with Premier Daladier and Foreign Minister Bonnet.

Chamberlain's return coincided with a new proclamation by King George VI published in tonight's London Gazette canceling previous proclamations which had ordered full and partial mobilization of the British fleet in September.

Gimbel Scion, Yale Junior, Ill After Poison Dose

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 25 (U.P.).—Nicholas Gimbel, 20, stepson of Louis Gimble, of New York, member of the Gimbel Department Store family, was in New Haven Hospital tonight, seriously ill from strychnine poisoning.

The youth, a junior at Yale and business manager of the Yale Daily News, telephoned a physician friend connected with the school at 8 p. m. today and said he was suffering from the poison.

The physician took him to the hospital, where he was given emergency treatment. Yale officials said his condition still was critical, but he was expected to recover.

attitude" in the United States toward the Nazi anti-Semitic campaigns.

Dieckhoff moved his sailing up two days, after originally planning to depart today, and boarded a German liner incognito, using a cargo entrance to avoid demonstrations such as those surrounding sailings of other German ships recently.

Just before sailing, Secretary Hull issued a formal statement in which he said the conference offered "a solid cause for hope in a world threatened with despair."

Hails Coming Parley

He hailed as encouraging the fact that "the representatives of 21 nations can meet to discuss their problems in a spirit of trust, understanding and tolerance."

"This approach to international relations," the Secretary added, "strengthens our faith in the eventual triumph of integrity, justice, respect for order based on law, and recognition of the essential dignity and worth of the human spirit and mind."

Hull gave this as a prime goal of the nations to be represented at Lima:

"To strengthen their traditional ties and endeavor to create new bonds of solidarity which would serve to eliminate the danger of war among themselves and to safeguard them from the propagation on their soil of extra-continental disputes."

"Spirit of Give and Take"

He spoke of the conference purpose "of elaborating measures of mutual benefit," and added:

"Our representatives will meet the delegates from the other American republics in a spirit of sympathetic give and take.

"While naturally giving every attention to the interests of the United States, they will work on the principle that what is for the good of all is to the advantage of each.

"I am confident that the work accomplished and the measures agreed upon at Lima will commend themselves to the thoughtful attention and the support of all of the American peoples."

Largely because of disturbed conditions in other parts of the world, the State Department regards the forthcoming conference as the most important meeting the 21 Pan-American republics ever held.

Nazis Making Aryans Divorce Jewish Wives

Threaten Loss of Jobs
Issue New Decrees
Boycotts Hurt Trade

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Nov. 25.—The Nazi government added two more regulations today to its campaign against Jewish business.

One provided that Jews be dropped from the roster of registered handicraftsmen.

The other was that stocks of Jewish retail shops, to be liquidated before January 1, are to be handed over to various governmental trade departments or public receivers in bankruptcy.

And, while Japan, Germany and Italy observed the anniversary of their anti-Communist pact and Germany and Japan reached an accord on cultural co-operation, economic pressure was being applied to have Aryans divorce Jewish wives on penalty of losing their jobs.

Instances were known of "unofficial representations" made by big concerns to Aryan employes to divorce Jewish wives.

Marriage Decree Reported

Official confirmation was lacking for reports that a decree was being contemplated compelling the dissolution of so-called mixed marriages.

Other developments today included:

A declaration by Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop that the German-Japanese-Italian anti-Communist pact had checked communism in Spain, China and Czecho-Slovakia.

Transmission by the United States Embassy of a note to the German government concerning Austrian bonds, the main part of which involves $24,055,708.92 due the United States for flour and other foods sold Austria just after the World War. The contents were not divulged, but it was believed the note rejected a German communication, likewise unpublished, last Monday. (In Washington it was reported the United States insisted Germany must assume the Austrian debt.)

The interpretation that a new order by Field Marshal Goering against further anti-Jewish street actions meant that foreign boycotts were cutting seriously into German trade.

Goebbels Complains

Propaganda Minister Goebbels, in a meeting of the Nazi recreation organization, "Strength Through Joy," and the Federal Culture Chamber, complained that:

"Other countries are defending the Jews in Germany, but unfortunately they do not take them off our hands.

"The world-wide drive against Germany is insolent speculation on our proverbial German sentimentality and softness of heart. But we are immune to that now."

Speeches by Foreign Minister Ciano of Italy, Hachiro Arita of Japan and Von Ribbentrop were broadcast from their respective capitals affirming the anti-Communist pact and giving pledges to renew their fight against Bolshevism, which to most Nazis is synonymous with Judaism.

Australia Won't Return New Guinea to Reich

Melbourne, Australia, Nov. 25 (AP).—Prime Minister Joseph A. Lyons said in an interview today that Australia has no intention of handing New Guinea back to Germany.

It was the first official pronouncement on the subject since Germany's drive for return of her war-lost colonies was started. Lyons added that he had received no suggestion from British Prime Minister Chamberlain for return of the former German territory.

Polish Troops Take New Czech Area After 'Incident'

Warsaw, Nov. 25 (AP).—Poland obtained about 120 square miles of Czecho-Slovak territory today by swift military action which a communique said followed an attack on the Polish border demarcation committee in Czecho-Slovakia and a subsequent Polish protest to Prague.

Polish troops occupied an area in the Czasa district which Poland was to have taken over December 1 under a Prague-Warsaw land transfer settlement reached after the four-power Munich agreement of September 29. Czasa borders on the Teschen region which was previously ceded to Poland.

The official statement today said during the occupation there were incidents caused by Czech soldiers and gendarmes, but details were not given. An earlier communique said the Polish committee was attacked by a Czech mob while traveling in an automobile to confer with the Czechs over the new boundary.

Casimir Pappee, Polish Minister to Prague, protested the incident to the Czecho-Slovak government, the announcement added, and demanded immediate occupation of the territory, which was agreed to by the Czechco-Slovak government.

Chamberlain Talks to Duke On Wallis' Rank

Bows to Baltimorean
Confer in Paris
Promises Welcome

By the United Press.

Paris, Nov. 25.—Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain was understood tonight to have assured the Duke of Windsor, in their 22-minute talk here Thursday, that the British cabinet would soon take up the matter of royal rank for Edward's American-born duchess.

Chamberlain left for London after informing the Windsors that they are welcome to return to England at any time.

The only thing standing in the way of an early visit to England by the duke and duchess is the matter of Edward's insistence that she be given the rank of "Her Royal Highness" instead of "Her Grace" and occupy a position among the duchesses of the realm outranked only by the wives of Edward's brothers, Gloucester and Kent.

When the duke presented the former Mrs. Simpson to Chamberlain at the Hotel Meurice Thursday evening he introduced her as "Her Royal Highness" and the prime minister bowed low.

Chamberlain, accompanied by British foreign secretary, Viscount Halifax, was said to have listened attentively as Edward explained that his wife must be accepted as royalty if he returns to England.

It was then, according to informed persons, that Chamberlain assured him the cabinet shortly would discuss the matter.

These persons said the prime minister, who "wants peace in all circles, not only political," probably would attempt to carry out his traditional policy of compromise in dealing with the situation.

He was said to have informed Edward that the latter's mother, Queen Mother Mary, was particularly anxious to see him, perhaps at a family Christmas reunion at Sandringham estate.

"Mr. Chamberlain is a practical man," a British source said. "It might be a graceful way for all concerned if the duke went home for Christmas, with or without the duchess, providing the New Year's honors' list contained a measure regarding the duchess which would give him satisfaction.

"This can be done in 24 hours by the same process by which she was deprived of royal ranking at the time of their marriage.

"The cabinet plays the chief role in such action, although finally it must be done by royal decree, with consent of the government."

Schoolboy 'Blackshirts' May Be Investigated by Dies

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, Nov. 25.—The schoolboy chieftain of the blackshirts "C?C" said today his organization reached into the high schools of at least seven cities in the Nation.

While the leader, "Commissar" Milton Walser, 17, told his story to county authorities, Representative Dies (Democrat), Texas, announced at Washington that ramifications of the secret group might come under scrutiny of his House committee investigating un-American activities.

Dies said he telegraphed the Oklahoma county attorney for information.

Walser told E. W. Brown, assistant county attorney, the "C?C" or Curiosity Club, seeking a new economic order, had organized in schools in New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Seattle, Bridgeport, Conn., Los Angeles and Youngstown, Ohio.

Brown said he believed he was dealing with "an adolescent high school outfit in which there isn't any communism or fascism," but that he would not reply to Dies' telegram before tomorrow.

Brown said the boys "told me that if it was unlawful for them to continue they would quit meeting."

Vice Commissar Manford Ishmael, 18, said the club had disbandad for the time being for fear of unfavorable publicity to "the sons and daughters of the rich class of people" among 33 members here.

Walser said only 20 of the members had the uniforms of black boots and shirts and semimilitary trousers because "they cost $27.35."

Bolivia Proclaims State of Siege

La Paz, Bolivia, Nov. 25 (AP).—The government today proclaimed a state of siege—a form of martial law—throughout Bolivia and at the same time announced suppression of a rebellion and capture of a number of rebels.

Police said conspirators made an incursion today into barracks and tried to induce soldiers, with promises of large sums of money, to join a revolution.

The soldiers remained loyal, said the statement, and their officers seized some of the conspirators.

Hudson Bay Junction is east of Prince Albert, near the Manitoba line.

Park View Christian Pastor Seeks Adult-Youth Accord

Mr. Black Loves Boys Leads Summer Trips Was Scoutmaster

THE REV. J. L. BLACK

Utilization of the "spiritual energy" of young people is one of religion's greatest needs today, believes the Rev. J. Lloyd Black, recently named to the Park View Christian pulpit.

For the church to accomplish this, there must be a deeper understanding between adults and young people, with a larger appreciation of youth's point of view, according to the clergyman, who always has been intensely interested in young folks.

While "things have changed" in the last 20 years, he admits, young people are just as fine in character as any of other generations, and he holds just as much faith in them as when he was a youth himself, back in Bluefield, W. Va. His first "sermon" attempt, he smilingly recalls, was made while an active Christian Endeavorer there, shortly before enrollment at the School of the Bible, Transylvania College, Lexington, Ky.

Combining his love of travel and boys, he and a group of youths from Rockville, scene of his last pastorate, have spent several summer vacations "roughing it" in Yellowstone National Park, accompanied by J. Lloyd, jr., 14, the pastor's son, Paul Junior High student. In addition to serving as scoutmaster, Mr. Black was active in other phases of civic work, being one of the two assistant Montgomery County Commissioners and Rockville Fire Co. chaplain.

Coming to Park View Christian Church, where he will "carry on" for his late friend and fellow-pastor, the Rev. Walter F. Smith, who died a short time ago after 33 years of service there, the Rev. Mr. Black has been pleased to find many parishioners who share his interest in young people.

Among his supporters at Park View are members of the official board, consisting of Simon McKimmie, parishioner since boyhood; Holden Crawford, church treasurer, and his son, J. B. Crawford, finance committee chairman; O. L. Beardsley, church clerk; Robert E. Lee, Samuel Artz, Irwin Beardsley, Edward Hinson, L. Sasser and Charles Jones, the latter head of the Junior Church. The pastor serves as an ex-officio member of the board.

One of the church's most interesting activities, the Junior Church, is modeled after the adult congregation, meeting at the same hour each Sunday. Its purpose is to familiarize and develop an interest in the regular form of worship.

Young people's work at Park View is centered around the Christian Endeavor Society, which met last night in the Sunday School building to map a winter program, and the Bible School, conducted by Beardsley. Other active groups are the Ladies' Aid Society, headed by Mrs. C. M. Burton, and the Missionary Society, under Mrs. J. B. Crawford. Larry Artz is the retiring president of the Endeavorers.

100 Will Help Shreve Mark 90th Birthday

Sons to Give Party
Ran Supplies for Gray Patriarch of Family

Benjamin R. Shreve will have one of the happiest days of his life Thursday when a hundred members of his old Virginia family will gather at the old estate near Falls Church to celebrate his ninetieth birthday anniversary.

Hale and hearty and intensively interested in memoirs of the Civil War which he has been writing for the past few years, Shreve will have a large audience at the home of his sons, Edgar and Prentiss Shreve, at Dunn Loring, to recall the old war days.

With as many as five generations of the Shreve family about him, the old gentleman is expected to recall the times when he and his sister used to smuggle messages and supplies from Washington to Col. Mosby, who spent much of the war period near Fairfax County.

Particularly does he enjoy recalling at family reunions the time two of them got a new uniform for Gen. J. E. B. Stuart in Washington and smuggled it through Union lines for delivery near Winchester. They put it under a wagon seat and sat on the seat when they were stopped.

Shreve was too young to enlist in the Confederate Army, although two older brothers were officers. Richard Southern Shreve was a lieutenant colonel under "Jeb" Stuart, but has been dead a number of years. His other brother, George, now is the only survivor of Maj. Pelham's original artillery battery attached to Stuart's Cavalry.

Brother George came to Washington last summer after the Gettysburg reunion.

Shreve was born at Waycroft, the estate in Arlington County of his grandfather, Col. Samuel Shreve, of the Revolutionary War. Waycroft was part of the District when Shreve was born. He was raised at his parent's estate, Mount Pleasant, near Falls Church. The old home is believed to be more than 200 years old.

Most of Shreve's life was spent on his farm near Dunn Loring on part of the original family estate. After the death of his wife, the former Kate Ball, of Washington, he retired to Leesburg, Va., to live near his daughter, Mrs. Pearl Jenkins.

Los Angeles, Nov. 25—Fires in the Santa Monica and San Bernardino Mountains continued as serious menaces to property today, after causing some $5,000,000 damage in destruction of homes and watershed protective growth.

For the third time, the fire in the Santa Monica-Brentwood region broke out of control. It threatened to eat its way toward half a hundred expensive homes in lower Mandeville Canyon, adjoining Brentwood, where live many Hollywood screen players, including Joan Crawford, Shirley Temple, James Stewart, and Pat O'Brien.

Women and children were evacuated from the village of Crestline, but firemen believed the flames had been deflected at least temporarily.

Contributing Strength

Ceremonies at Warm Springs always send a warming atmosphere throughout the country. In that retreat the President forsakes the roles of Chief Executive and political leader and becomes the general of the courageous army that is fighting infantile paralysis. More than any other individual, Mr. Roosevelt is responsible for the excellent progress of that cause.

Before any real advance can be expected in combating any disease the national conscience must be touched. Millions of homes must be made aware of lurking dangers. Medical research must be assisted in its untiring search for new remedies. Philanthropists must be inspired to finance these efforts and the public to provide funds for rehabilitation of the victims. When these aims have been achieved control, if not eradication, of the malady is frequently only a matter of time.

President Roosevelt is both the inspiration and the active leader of the campaign against poliomyelitis. In addition to the curative work carried on at Warm Springs, funds raised at the annual birthday balls in honor of the President have brought into being the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. And next year the President hopes to see permanent chapters of the foundation established in every county of all 48 States.

The value of such organization demands no proof. If any were needed, however, it could be readily found in the work of the District Tuberculosis Association, now celebrating its thirtieth anniversary. From a modest beginning that agency has grown into a civic institution of vital importance to the health of the community. Its program, financed by the sale of Christmas Seals at this season every year, includes health education, research, rehabilitation, case-finding, training of personnel and co-operation with governmental institutions.

No less important work is being done in the fields of cancer and other diseases. In each case health, and life itself, is being made more secure. From whatever angle it may be viewed, that is a national asset. At a time when it becomes increasingly evident that any nation must be strong to survive, the work of these agencies acquires patriotic as well as humanitarian significance.

Fumbling The Ball

Secretary Ickes has acquired an unenviable reputation as a master of invective. His habit of berating his critics instead of squarely meeting their charges long since created doubts as to his temperamental fitness for the responsible position he occupies.

But in his latest verbal tilt with Representative Dies, chairman of the committee which is supposedly "investigating un-American activities," Ickes is in a strong strategic position. There could be no surer way of discrediting the work of the Dies committee than to provoke its chairman to an exchange of epithets calculated to distract attention from the subject at issue. Whether from force of habit or by intent, Mr. Ickes has succeeded in effecting that diversion, with the willing and highly ingenuous co-operation of Mr. Dies.

From the beginning, the conduct of the Dies inquiry has been characterized by an unsystematic method of procedure and a leaning toward improper evidence sufficiently pronounced to bring an unprecedented rebuke from President Roosevelt himself. Despite these handicaps, however, enough telling testimony has been presented to show the need for an objective and searching investigation under leadership more likely to be impressive than is that of Mr. Dies.

The committee could have performed a valuable service, for instance, by inquiring more fully into the records of certain Government officials whose names have already been mentioned as Communist "fellow travelers." Instead of loose generalities to the effect that Secretary Ickes, Secretary Perkins and WPA Administrator Hopkins are surrounded by dangerous radicals and "crackpots" Mr. Dies should long ago have devised a plan for testing the truth of his unsubstantiated assertions. Loud language is no substitute for lack of convincing evidence.

By his own intemperate utterances Mr. Dies has created a well-grounded suspicion that he is long on prejudice but short on proof. That impression is strengthened by his failure to eliminate untrustworthy witnesses and to assure fair treatment for those against whom charges are made. That the committee is fumbling after real evidence that probably exists, and might be used with excellent effect, is apparent. But unless its chairman radically changes his methods of procedure, the opportunity to do constructive work will soon be irretrievably lost, if that is not already the case.

Openings In Palestine

The German Jewish refugee problem cannot be solved by mass migration. But that fact only emphasizes the urgent need of a haven for those who can somehow manage to escape the desperate future that faces them in the Third Reich.

Of equal immediacy is the plight of tens of thousands who have found a temporary refuge in bordering lands such as the Netherlands, Belgium and Switzerland. These democracies are incapable of providing a permanent home for more than a fraction of those now receiving emergency hospitality.

Great Britain's recent action, in offering to open areas in British Guiana and Tanganyika for Jewish settlement, was both constructive and statesmanlike. Yet the fact cannot be ignored that it would take years and a vast capital outlay to settle any large number of refugees in those territories. It is of more immediate importance, therefore, that concurrently the British government is considering making a large increase in immigration figures for Palestine.

The colonial secretary, Malcolm MacDonald, is quite right in saying that when the British government promised to facilitate the establishment of a national home for Jews in Palestine, it "never anticipated the present fierce persecution in Europe." Clearly Palestine cannot harbor all the Jews of Germany. But it can absorb a goodly number of those at present seeking a place of refuge. And Great Britain would be acting not only on humanitarian grounds but in accordance with her own solemn pledges, in permitting the immediate emigration to the Holy Land of as many Jews as can be constructively settled there.

Of the 135,000 Jews who have managed to leave the Third Reich during the last five years no fewer than 43,000 have made their new homes in Palestine. The economic benefit which this has brought the country indicates that a large additional number could be taken in almost immediately.

To be sure, there is the political obstacle of Arab Nationalist opposition, which during the past few years has taken increasingly violent form. But while Great Britain cannot ignore the feelings of the Arabs, the London government must also respect the pledges embodied in the Balfour declaration of 1917 and the Palestine mandate of 1922.

Mr. MacDonald's statement in the House of Commons shows that all of these considerations are now very much in the mind of the British. To permit an increase in Jewish immigration to Palestine would not merely be an evidence of British good faith but also a constructive and wholly appropriate move. In the long run it would probably benefit the Arabs as well as the Jews. For, as the British colonial secretary points out, the efforts of the Zionists, by greatly improving health facilities in Palestine, have made possible the phenomenal growth of the Arab population there since 1918.

Taxicab Limitations

Contrary to expectations, the cost of compulsory liability insurance has not greatly reduced the number of taxicabs operating in Washington. The Public Utilities Commission is planning, therefore, to make another request to Congress for permission to deny applications for new licenses. By such means, the PUC proposes gradually to reduce the number of operating cabs from the present level of about 3,600 to 2,500.

Of course, any such proposal will meet with indignant protests from residents who complain that during rush hours or in stormy weather the number of cabs is now totally inadequate to meet demands. It should, however, be obvious that in no city where taxicab fares are as low as in Washington or even moderately reasonable, is it possible to meet emergency demands without delay or inconvenience to the public. If cabs were available whenever needed, there would be a disastrous surplusage during the greater part of the day under normal conditions.

The 2,500-cab limit set by the PUC is predicated upon the assumption that any larger number means inadequate earnings for drivers. There are differences of opinion as to whether an increase in fares would be economically beneficial. Some operators believe that in the long run business would be lost and the advantage of an increase more than offset. A limitation of numbers combined with higher fares would no doubt please the operators. At the same time, it would encourage as well as compel a shift of patronage from cabs to other public transporation agencies.

In a city with a difficult problem of traffic congestion, the removal from the streets of about 1,000 taxicabs would undoubtedly be welcomed. The question ought to be considered from the viewpoint of the city's transportation system as a whole. On that basis the desirability of a reduction in the number of cabs seems evident. Just how great that reduction should be, however, can be determined only by experience. The test is primarily whether the community can support the service—that is assure a decent living and a reasonable working day to the operators.

A Fair Offer

Before the Joint Congressional Committee investigating the TVA, Wendell L. Willkie, president of the Commonwealth and Southern, has reiterated his willingness to sell the company's properties in the TVA area at a fair price. By this he does not mean a valuation set by the representatives of the company. Nor is he prepared to accept the findings of an interested purchaser, the TVA authorities, or of a Congressional investigating committe. What he seeks is valuation by an expert and impartial body. His suggestion, first made some time ago, is that the SEC should determine the sales value of the Tennessee Electric Power Co., a subsidiary of the company which he heads.

Naturally Mr. Willkie does not welcome the prospect of a forced sale at any price. However, he realizes that, at least in the Tennessee Valley area, about all that is left for determination is the terms of sale for private power facilities. Therefore, he asks only that the duplication of existing facilities be avoided, that the TVA should buy private utility properties in their entirety at a fair price, and that the area in which it proposes to operate should be clearly defined.

These are all reasonable demands—the least that could be asked in justice to the owners of private properties facing the threat of extinction by competition from governmentally subsidized power units. Much more than the interests of a special group of investors is involved, however, in the present controversy. Acceptance by the Government of a fair offer to sell, giving assurance that private investors will not be "squeezed out" by unfair competitive tactics of subsidized agencies, would do much to restore confidence in the future of the private utility industry and to create investment support for it.

So long as any private utility anywhere faces the possibility of having to sell out at a price fixed by a governmental purchaser able to dictate terms, capital will not flow in normal amounts into the industry. The uncertainties confronting the utilities undoubtedly account largely for the limited outlays for new construction and new equipment in recent years. Removal of such uncertainties would not only greatly stimulate the capital market, but also indirectly provide more work and wages for those engaged in the heavy industries.

Mr. Willkie has attested the sincerity of his offer to sell by agreeing to abide by the findings of a Government agency which by no stretch of the imagination could be regarded as an ally of the private utilities. If his offer is accepted, the Congressional committee of inquiry would have no further need or excuse for wrangling over technical questions of valuation. As Mr. Willkie points out, that should be left to experts who alone are qualified to discharge such laborious and exacting tasks.

The New Education

The Secretary of Commerce tells the superintendents of Virginia schools, in convention assembled, that: "We need a new kind of education for a new kind of civilization." And all the superintendents have to do to bring this about is to instruct the teachers to teach the pupils how to solve all economic problems, including unemployment, and to avoid international friction with certain bullies who are a-pushin' and a-shovin'.

It may be doubted, however, that Mr. Roper knows exactly the kind of new education necessary. The schoolmen will agree that his suggestion of "adequate compensation" for teachers is a step in the right direction. But beyond that point it may be that the program is a trifle nebulous.

Meanwhile it is interesting to note that many of the problems of civilization disappear before they are solved. We are not now, for instance, worrying over the unemployment of those displaced from jobs by the advent of the automobile. And there are strong probabilities that the "new education" is already incubating in the brain of a kid in kindergarten, and will become "new" as soon as he has thought out some old ideas for himself. One of his new-old ideas may be that only production creates wealth; and that fundamental values, material or spiritual, depend on willingness to defend them.

A Chicagoan, who had been stealing 200-pound manhole covers, taking one at a time and rolling it to a junkyard and selling it, was arrested the other day. He said he did this to keep from having to work.

Buses On K Street

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Referring to The Post Safety Campaign, may I ask the reason northbound Capital Transit buses are routed via the middle lane of K street, rather than the outside lane? These buses travel from Twelfth to Sixteenth on K street, and then make a righthand turn into Sixteenth street right through traffic of the outside lane. During the rush hours these buses are packed to the doors with passengers. The driver, therefore, is unable to see east on K street and has, perforce, to make this turn blind, thus creating a potential accident situation.

Were the buses routed via the outside lane of K street there would be less chance of an accident, as the righthand turn would then be a simple matter.

If left as it is there will, no doubt, be a serious accident when some outside driver tries to "beat the light." A BUS RIDER.

[The Capital Transit Co. answers the questions as follows:

"The use of the center roadway is considered more practical because the side roadways are intended for vehicles stopping and parking and the operation of a bus through those roadways would interfere with such vehicles backing into stops, and on the other hand, such maneuvering on the part of vehicles would interfere with the operation of buses.

"The difficulty of making right turns is recognized, but on the other hand left turns at certain points would be more difficult from the outside lane.

"The use of the inside lane was the result of conferences with public authorities and was determined to be the least objectionable from the standpoint of other users of the street."]

The "Commercial Itch"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Like "Missouri Minded" and "Believer of Justice," I, too, seek enlightenment as to why the Jewish situation so "irritates" our President. The sinking of the U. S. S. Panay and the subsequent machine gunning of her crew, the atrocities committed against women and children in the rape of Nanking, these created no such itch under the Presidential collar notwithstanding that "one could scarcely believe that such things could occur in a twentieth century civilization."

Recently through The Washington Post "Wantmore Truth" strove to explain that merely human rights are not to be compared with financial and property rights. He is correct. After all, of what value are human rights? It is of far more importance that financial rights should not be endangered as long as shekels are to be raked in by selling scrap and junk to a good customer.

Can it be a "commercial itch" that keeps Ambassador Grew glued to Tokyo yet whisks Ambassador Wilson out of Berlin and onto the high seas?

Pedestrian Control

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was interesting to read in your esteemed paper recently that for two days there had not been found a careful automobile driver in the District, not even one courteous driver. It is hoped that those who favor pedestrian control have read these facts.

The pedestrian has very few rights and it is evident that the automobile driver as a whole does not allow the pedestrian to exercise even those few rights.

A survey at many principal crossings will show that a pedestrian has few chances to cross on a green light at present—for example Pennsylvania avenue at Fourteenth street.

There should be driver control before pedestrian control.

Watch The Market

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial "A Major Dilemma" is splendid. That the Government should be willing to increase its income from nefarious sources is something that must lower us in the eyes of other nations. Upright nations should keep their hands clean. Keep up your outspokenness; it is refreshing in these days of obsequiousness.

May I say a word about the trade treaties. We shall not benefit. England may let in American stockings and shoes, but Britons are brought up to buy British; they will not buy ours. They say, anyway, that their own goods are cheaper and better; that American workmanship is careless. Also I have heard a British salesman say that it is a good thing that America hates Germany so much and will not trade with her, "it leaves that field open for us."

That's just it. Needing to keep on friendly terms with us, England does not fight us to destroy our rivalry in trade, but she uses our emotionalism to drive us out of markets that she wants to supply. Germany will not feel the pinch we hope for; because she can get everything she wants from the British Empire, Japan, and other countries who do not like us. We as a Nation are too pleased with ourselves to pay attention to danger until it hits us, and then it is too late.

But watch the market and business. And when next spring we sag into another depression, from which we shall not come out, we shall begin to see how neatly we have been taken in again by England and that group over here who wants communism and a dictatorship of that party. I repeat again, we shall be in a worse depression next year. ALAN CARSON.

Immoral Comparisons

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Nazi apologists are now seeking to justify the outrages and atrocities against their Jewish minority by drawing the deadly parallel. The records of historical and contemporaneous nations are being ransacked to find justifying instances of comparative atrocity.

The conscience of mankind has gained many degrees of enlightenment in the progress of civilization. Many things were done by "them of olden times," which are now universally condemned and reprobated. Contemporaneous evils find no justification in Christian ethics. Does Germany hope to win her case before the bar of the conscience of mankind by crimination and recrimination? How do atrocities against Negroes in Georgia justify outrages against Jews in Germany? Elimination by comparison is a legitimate process in algebra but not in ethics. Immoral comparisons are odious.

Thanksgiving

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: According to custom, I attended Divine service Thursday and gave thanks that my Government had only confiscated or destroyed nine-tenths of my accumulations of a lifetime and had not yet destroyed the remaining one-tenth.

I am certainly against the brutalities being heaped upon the Jews in Germany, for I have suffered at the hands of my own Government.

Chicago And The Memorial

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Arthur L. Scarlett, writing with charming candor from Chicago in approval of a Jefferson Memorial in Potomac Park, says truthfully that it is to be built not with funds of Washingtonians but of the whole United States to whom the rapidly maturing stone-and-memorial-dotted Capital belongs. And since Congress in its infinite wisdom has elected the Potomac Park site as goat, that's all right with him; since the overwhelming opinion of the great mass of Washington residents, who presumably are still Americans, merits nothing but passing contempt.

Some years ago it was solemnly proposed to move the Capital to Chicago or at least make the Midwest metropolis co-Capital. Who knows but that, in case of invasion, this device may not have to be resorted to? Let us, then, assume America has been invaded, the papers and red tape moved to Chicago, and after exclusion of the foe and scrimonious debate Chicago has been decided on as a permanent location.

Build the Jefferson Memorial in Chicago, by usurpation of 10 acres of space now devoted to park; borings to reach a rock base to be made at once; trees to be slashed in anticipation of the march of progress; all protests to be treated with the contempt they merit. The youths done out of athletic space will be better off loafing on street corners or racing the highways in high-speed cars anyhow!

"Bugaboo Propaganda"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The writer is not a member of the Civil Liberties Union, nor does he know anything about its membership, but he is a citizen of the United States, a taxpayer, a former service man who fought for what I thought was democracy about 18 years ago. As a citizen, I have freedom of speech, as a taxpayer my money goes to pay the Dies committee who were given a specific job by a resolution from the House of Representatives, in order that Congress may be guided to enact certain legislation.

Certainly Congressman Dies and his committee were not ordered to send out a lot of bugaboo publicity against the Civil Liberties Union, Mr. Ickes, Mr. Collier, Mr. Hopkins, just because they believe in American principles. Nor was the Dies committee given authority to listen to publicity hounds.

Congressman Dies should confine himself to the issue and the spirit of the resolution of Congress. Find out who supports spies in our Nation, who supports men seeking to overthrow our Government by force, who aids the agents, movements, organizations, that preach hatred, malice and intolerance, which are alien to our freedom-loving principles.

This is no time for political football strategy. We need a truly American investigation. Stop the Hitler method of bugaboo propaganda. HARRY B. BACHRACH.

Questions From Confusion

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The following questions reflect the confusion in my mind regarding the present situation in Germany and its relation to our own problems.

Why is such an outcry made in the United States regarding the predicament of the German Jews, when there was so little protest against the rape of Ethiopia, China and Spain?

Why, with 12,000,000 Americans out of work, should we admit tens of thousands of foreign refugees?

Why do Americans who demand that these refugees be admitted to the United States express so little interest in those who are already here and unemployed?

The Post Impressionist

What Do You Read, My Lord?

MUCH REMAINS to be said on the inexhaustible subject of words, those little tantalizing tools that have become so inseparable a part of us. We speak them; we think them; we even dream them—sometimes some very good ones. My friend Clara Hogue once dreamed this fresh and immortal version of a familiar definition: "'When a peanut annoys a pachyderm, that's news.' And there was dear old Samuel Taylor Coleridge, "the sublime somnambulist," who dreamed some very beautiful words about Kubla Khan and caverns measureless to man.

We also play with words. Think what a good time Lewis Carroll must have had with his adventures in nonsenseland, and with what relish he must have coined his "brillig" and "tulgey" and galumphing" and the "mimsy borogoves." Puns have been an elegant pastime for centuries, though, as Louis Untermeyer puts it, they are "traditionally condemned but privately relished." Even today comedians would starve without them. We get special amusement from persons who unwittingly murder the king's English. The other day I heard of the recently immigrant Russian girl who, on fortuitously meeting an old friend in a hotel lobby, exclaimed: "What a co-accident?"

My son Dick the other night explained that the reason he was still awake at 10 o'clock was that his brother had been telling him the story of "Alabama and the Forty Nights." That is almost as good as the boy who defined the Equator as a menagerie lion running around the earth. Years ago there used to be a flock of lapsi linguі going around, known as spoonerisms, usually attributed to teachers and ministers. There was the preacher, for example, who addressed his rural congregation as "Ye tons of soil," not to mention the benign cleric who took for his text: "Till heaven and earth shall pass, one tot or one jittle shall in no wise pass from the law." And it is told that he made the fatal mistake of going back to correct himself, and emerged disastrously with "one jit and one tittle."

Our enjoyment of such verbal diversions only shows how much we like to play with words. In some form or another we all do it. Cross-word puzzles, anagrams, double crostics, cryptograms, puns, even rhymes are but a few manifestations of the witchery of words. No wonder that when placed one after another in a carefully deliberated order they have such power over our minds and actions.

To a few dull people one word is as good as another. Some never use a monosyllabic word when a polysyllable can be found; and there is the equally obnoxious extreme of those who sacrifice nicety of expression for oversimplification and brevity. It pains me, too, to hear people apologize after using a "big" word. They seem so afraid of their own language. So long as a person is not bombastic, let him use the words that to him best express what he is trying to say, be they big or little.

We have so many unused words that deserve a break once in a while. I deplore such retrogressive influences as basic English. Why be restricted to 50 or 1,000 words when there are so many, perhaps better ones? Like snowflakes from the sky, no two are alike in design and meaning. Neither do I like the idea of a universal language, and I think such artificial schemes as Esperanto will die a natural death, because they have no soul.

Real feeling for words is not so abundant as you'd think, even in those who need it in their business. James Thurber tells that E. B. White once reported for a certain Seattle newspaper that did not permit the use of the word "mangle" in its columns. A poor husband found the body of his murdered wife at the morgue, and what did he say? White reported his words as "My God, it's her!" But the insensitive editor changed them to "My God, it is she!" and E. B. W. moved on to the next town.

In writing of a fellow poet, Stephen Spender once said: "If he is not seduced by the beauty of words and sounds which he so sparklingly commands, he will write some of the greatest poetry of our time." Though I suppose there is a grain of authority in this criticism, nevertheless I resent it, for I believe that any poet worth his salt must be seduced by the beauty of words. Perhaps he may try to renounce his paramour, but her delicate pervading perfume will linger and draw him back. He will never be able to escape the beauty of words, nor will he ultimately wish to; and many times he will be tempted to use a word for the sake of its loveliness or because, like a gem, it may have "shone in Solomon's temple or in Cleopatra's hair."

In his recent book, "The Tyranny of Words," Stuart Chase shows that we are pretty much in a jungle with regard to many such words as "liberty," "fascism" and "property;" and that statesmen and economists especially are having serious word trouble. Words are still our masters, and if you doubt that try roaming through an unabridged dictionary some rainy afternoon. Then go to bed early, dream a little and get up early in the morning and write a poem. Oh, for a good word, and the right one!

Backhand Compliment

SOME AMERICANS are beginning to ask why the Nazi atrocities should cause any more horror in the civilized nations than was caused by the massacres and deportations and the suppression of religion in Soviet Russia and by the butchering of priests and nuns, the burning of churches and the persecution of Catholics in Spain. The oppression of Catholics in Mexico is cited, too, in the same sense.

PEGLER

In a wry way the feeling about the horror in Germany is a compliment to the Germans. They had been regarded as a highly civilized people, and the regime which is doing all this constantly boasts of its civilization.

Russia, on the other hand, was a very backward nation from which the rest of the world expected nothing better. The masses were beastly ignorant and verminous, and it cannot be forgotten that the revolution and the program of atrocity came abruptly after Russian soldiers had been sent into battle without bullets for their rifles against well-armed German troops.

THEY HAD BEEN sold out by conscienceless grafters and naturally were furious, but of first importance is the fact that they were a low-grade people. The Germans, in their superiority, regarded them as cattle.

In Spain the people were ignorant, too, but there were other factors. For one, the masses, to quote an eminent Catholic publicist, had been driven to apostasy by poverty, destitution and injustice and had grown to hate the church because they hated the friends of the church who exploited them and whom the church did nothing to rebuke or correct. Moreover, the civil war in Spain was promoted and backed by Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany.

There were atrocities just as horrible on the rebel side, and, anyway, this was a war in hot blood between two armed factions which, being a civil war, inevitably produced appalling inhumanity on both sides.

AS TO MEXICO, our general public has not much information. Perhaps our press deserves censure for failing to give the situation greater play, although, as one who has worked a long time in the business, both for a big press association and for newspapers, I can say that the instinctive sense of news values and no ulterior reason governed that. But Mexico is another country of mass ignorance, and the Germans would resent being compared with the masses of Mexico in this respect.

In Germany the people are intelligent, the standard of education is high and there is no excuse of hot blood. Yet the Germans have carried on these ferocious activities for years and now have come to the point of threatening to extinguish 700,000 people "by fire and sword," in cold blood. That sounds like darkest Russia or Turkey.

Our communists, of course, will deny that there were ever any massacres or other atrocities in Russia and will argue that the confiscation of property and the imprisonment, degradation and deportation of those who owned it was a work of nobility on the ground that the property belonged to the people and was then devoted to their uses.

COMMUNISM AND Nazism are alike in this respect, however. The Nazis claim that the property of the Jews really belongs to the people, and they will not throw it up for grabs or slip it to favored individuals but will use it for the purposes of their government, which was driven to these confiscations by its necessities, not by indignation over the assassination in Paris. The assassination was just the pretext. They will confiscate Catholic church property next and may confiscate the property of individual Catholics and eventually even extinguish them by "fire and sword."

The Russian atrocities also were carried out in cold blood, but the Germans professed to be aghast at such conduct and have held themselves to be better people than the bolsheviki. Americans gave them credit for that, too. There is no possible doubt that the German nation which is doing all these things is far superior in intellect and discipline to the Russians, Spaniards and Mexicans in the mass.

THAT IS WHY the Nazi atrocities are so much more shocking, although, for the sake of consistency, it should be said that this country did register a distinct shock at so much of the Russian atrocities as the correspondents were able to observe or learn of and send out.

Aside from the moral courage but in addition thereto, it must be kept in mind that Nazi Germany and Italy have tentatively ganged up with Japan and have turned on the heat against the United States. They may not mean business, but this country doesn't understand that kind of kidding.

"Good American, But . . ."

The President seems to have created a controversy within a controversy by what he said the other day about opposition in Washington to a current plan for locating the new Jefferson memorial in the Tidal Basin area, where the Japanese cherry trees now stand.

Mr. Roosevelt has given it as his opinion that all this hullabaloo over the possible destruction of the cherry trees is so much "flimflam." Rushing to their dictionaries, opponents of the project discovered that they were being accused by the President of the United States of resorting to "a deception; a trick; now, especially, a trick by which one is swindled."

Even in Washington, we gather, those are fighting words. At any rate, far from laughing the whole business out of court, Mr. Roosevelt apparently has succeeded in stimulating the opposition. The inhabitants of the Capital may not emulate the Japanese by writing poetry in cherry blossom time, but they are sentimental enough about the trees to resent being classed with card sharps and confidence men because they happen to feel there is no point in destroying one of the city's popular attractions. Flimflam is good American, but it may prove bad strategy.

54 Years of Service

THOMAS A. KELLEHER, oldest employe, in point of service, in the vast Agriculture Department—and possibly the oldest in point of service in Washington—retires on December 1. There is a story here that possibly he should tell; for Kelleher is a soft-spoken man, one with the sort of voice and the kind of eyes that lend to such a tale of patience and parting.

Anyhow, he told it to us yesterday in something like these words:

"Yes sir, I'd been trying to get in the Government Printing Office but the trouble was my age. I wasn't but 15 then, and that was too young for a place at the bench. And I'll never forget how I turned on the Agriculture Department; and one day, while standing in front of the building, I saw Dr. George B. Loring going in. He was the commissioner then.

"So I walked up and touched him on the arm, and started talking. Well, to make a long story short, he gave me a job, as a messenger, I remember. But it wasn't so long before they needed a boy to look after the silk-worms. They were experimenting along that line then; and the men, as I remember them, included Dr. L. O. Howard, E. A. Schwartz, Mary G. Chamney, Lawrence Bruner, Mary E. Murtfelt, Dr. C. V. Riley, the entomologist, and many others I don't remember so well. But those I mention all became famous.

"Well, all of this was sometime after January 2, 1884, when I went in. And my duty, pretty generally, was to look after those silk-worms and feed them, and the like."

SOMEONE TOOK UP the story here. And it appeared that in 1902, Secretary of Agriculture Wilson asked Congress for a $10,000 appropriation for the study of silk-worm culture, and this study went along until 1908, when it was concluded that the United States, because of obvious conditions, could never compete with the Orient in the field. Although the silk-worms and their mulberry food plant will thrive almost anywhere in the United States, the cost of raising them and reeling raw silk from the cocoons was seen as too great to permit of the competition.

And in 1908 this work, to which Kelleher had given his patience and study, was abandoned, and Kelleher turned to other pursuits in the Bureau of Entomology. But the idea, the fascination of the silk-worm, weren't lost on him. He set up a laboratory in the attic of his house in Mount Pleasant, and planted a mulberry tree in his backyard. Soon the experiments were getting along, just as they did when he was working over them in the department.

THEY GAVE HIM permission to publish a pamphlet on the subject, and this work, "The Culture of the Mulberry Silkworm," has gone to thousands of school teachers in the United States. Also, they gave him permission to sell, at nominal prices, the eggs from the silkworm which he developed in his attic laboratory. Time went on, and his clientele of school teachers and school pupils grew.

And now that retirement comes, he intends to press his researches even more. Understandably, that is what he would do.

"I'll have all the time I want now, and nothing to worry about. I may even take a trip to some of the colleges and universities—I've never been about the country much—and show them the results of my experiments. Don't you think that would be a good thing to do?"

AND OF COURSE it would, for Mr. Kelleher, who retires because he is attaining 70, really looks 20 years under his age. His step belies his years and his alert speech is misleading, too. Of course he should keep on—something which he definitely did when the Government itself had quit back in 1908.

Whatever he does, it will be in Washington. That's natural, too, because it was the place of his birth. And as this is being written, more than 100 of his fellow workers have signed up for a big party to be given today in honor of his leave-taking.

NOTES: Don't forget to call by The Post and submit your nominations for "Miss Civil Service." These continue to come in—and the larger the number, the better for the judges who will make the selection . . . The Washington Navy Yard Apprentice Alumni will give their annual fall dance at the Navy Yard Ballroom from 9 to 1 a. m., tonight . . . Local 2, U. F. W. A. proposes to the Agriculture Department the following points for the in-service training program: "That there be provision for employe participation in the execution of the in-service training program; that training courses be provided for supervisory officers in order that general supervisory practice shall be brought uniformly in line with the program and objectives of the department; that there be a place in the program for every department employe, high or low; that orientation of employes be planned for; that training for promotional opportunities be adequately provided."

Today And Tomorrow

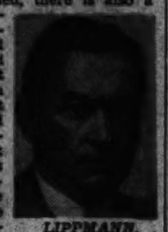
The Purpose And The Measure Of American Armament

WHILE THERE is substantial agreement in this country that the American defenses need to be strengthened, there is also a healthy objection to an hysterical and ill-considered armament program. In order that there should be no stampede, we must ask ourselves on what principle we should now be acting in order to determine the extent and the character of the new armaments? How ought we to go about the task of determining how much to arm and in what way we should arm?



LIPPMANN.

In discussing this matter the Baltimore Sun argues that "a well-planned armament program" must be based on reasonably definite answers to these questions: First, beyond continental United States and the Panama Canal, what else do we have to defend; second, what power or combination of powers "shall we conceivably be called upon to fight," and what powers, if any, might fight as allies on our side; third, how far may we count upon the cooperation of the Latin-American republics?

These are searching questions. But I venture to believe that they cannot be answered at this time.

The Sun would like, for example, to be told "in definite terms" whether we are threatened by a combination of powers and whether we shall have any allies. But if you put the question that way, you are assuming that all the other nations know exactly what they intend to do, and that we, alone, have to make up our minds about how to prepare ourselves. This, surely, is an unreal assumption. What we do will greatly influence what they do.

TO DEMONSTRATE THIS, let us suppose first that we decided to disarm completely, to tow the Navy up the Mississippi River, and to leave it there till it rusted and fell to pieces. Is it not evident that the idea of combined aggression from Europe and Asia in the Pacific and South America would immediately cease to be a vague possibility and become practical politics? And is it not evident that if we were disarmed, we should have no allies whatever, either in Europe or in this hemisphere?

Now, suppose on the contrary, that we are sufficiently strong to hold at bay an aggressor in one ocean while we defeated an aggressor in the other ocean. Is it not equally evident that if there existed no doubt about our ability and our will to be that strong, the chances are that a combination against us would never be formed? It would not be formed because it would be realized that a coalition is no good if either partner can be decisively defeated. And is it not also evident that because we were that strong, other nations which felt themselves menaced would in their own interest align themselves on our side, not only in war itself, but in prewar diplomacy?

THE SAME REASONING applies, I think, to the Sun's third question in regard to the attitude of the Latin-American republics toward hemisphere defense. If they see that we cannot or that we will not defend this hemisphere, they will be naturally disposed to find friends or allies elsewhere, and to make the best bargain with them that they can. If, on the other hand, they see that we mean what we say and have the means to do it, they will be far more likely to believe that their fundamental interests and ours are, as regards national defense, the same.

European experience, since 1936, has made this quite clear. Since Munich, the small states of Central Europe have had to come to terms with Germany. But the event which prepared the situation was the re-occupation of the Rhineland, and the failure of the British and the French to keep pace with German armaments. The western democracies were separated from their Central European allies when it was no longer clear that the western powers could and would be able to defend them.

For the fact of the matter is that strength attracts allies and disrupts hostile coalitions whereas weakness repels allies and encourages hostile coalitions.

For that reason we cannot ask ourselves whether we are arming against a combination of powers and whether we shall have allies. We must say, on the contrary, that the object of arming is to prevent the formation of a coalition of powers against us and to attract to our side a combination of allies.

IF WE ARE CLEAR in our minds that the purpose of our armaments is to make war against our vital interests impracticable, the measure of the armaments we shall need becomes reasonably clear. We have no vital interests that we mean to defend with arms either in Asia or in Europe. But it is our vital interest that Asiatic or European imperialism shall not be able to cross either of the two oceans, and that being unable, it shall not think of attempting it. To defend this vital interest, we have to be able to defeat decisively a potential enemy in either of the two oceans, and at the same time to hold at arm's length a potential enemy in the other ocean.

That does not mean two navies. It means one navy that is clearly stronger than the strongest of the aggressive powers. And then it means the defense of the Panama Canal, and an auxiliary force capable of containing an enemy in one ocean while the navy was defeating an enemy in the other ocean. It does not mean a great army. For it may be taken as the settled conviction of the American people that an American army will fight only in this hemisphere.

A program cut to this measure is not only defensive, but preventive. It is defensive in that it is designed only to enforce with arms the security and independence of the United States in this hemisphere. It is preventive in that a program of this sort is the surest and the only possible guarantee that a hostile combination for aggression will not be formed.

IF THE PROGRAM is to be truly preventive, the sooner it is adopted and acted upon the better. For modern armaments cannot be improvised quickly. Plants have to be built. Men have to be trained to manufacture the weapons and to use them. No one can attack us today. Probably no one could conceivably attack us in the next two or three years. But no one could attack Britain or France in 1936. By 1938 the situation had changed, and it had changed because the Germans started early and worked hard whereas the British and French started late and did not work hard.

Therefore, this is not too early to start large scale preparations for dangers that might develop in the next few years. If we do make the preparations now while there is time, we may be fairly certain that the very fact that we are sufficiently well armed will discourage before it is seriously attempted any aggression which might compel us to go to war.

The Farm Headache

By Mark Sullivan

Price Control Effects

FIVE YEARS AGO, during 1933, at President Roosevelt's press conferences, I used to hear him say that he and the New Deal were going to raise prices of farm crops. Several times, in various forms, he repeated at press conferences, and elsewhere informally, the declaration he made publicly in one of his early fireside talks, on October 22, 1933: "If we cannot do this (raise farm prices) one way we will do it another; do it we will."

SULLIVAN

Mr. Roosevelt never, so far as I know, named the price to which cotton or other crops would be raised. But elsewhere in the Administration, there were official calculations about "parity prices" which were interpreted as indicating that the goal for cotton would be 18 cents a pound.

Hearing Mr. Roosevelt say what he and the New Deal were going to do, I reflected that he had all the resources of the United States at his command. He had all the money in the Treasury, and as much more as he cared to borrow. He had the powers conferred on him by the AAA statutes, including the power to penalize any farmer who planted more than AAA said he should. He had, at that time, a control over Congress which would give him any further power he felt he needed. Altogether, I felt that Mr. Roosevelt should be able to do what he said he would. That cotton would go to 18 cents seemed to be what the vulgar call, cryptically, "a lead pipe cinch."

AT THAT POINT, my reflections were touched by a faint sordidness, a covetousness for easy money. Here was cotton selling below 10 cents a pound. And here was the Administration saying apparently that cotton was going to 18 cents. The path seemed plain; buy some cotton, hold it a few months or a year or so, and sell it at 80 per cent profit.

But as I cogitated on that, I reflected further. It was too easy. It was too good to be true. I recalled a saying of an old gentleman who lived on the farm where I spent my boyhood. He was given to argument. When an argument went against him he used to conclude, and in his mind decide the matter, by saying: "It can't be done—'tain't according to nature."

I recalled, too, what a successful speculator of my acquaintance used to say. His rule for making money in the markets was, "Find out what the crowd is doing—and do the opposite." And it occurred to me that too many persons knew about Mr. Roosevelt's determination—he was proclaiming it from the White House. Although I concluded that I did not have as much confidence in Mr. Roosevelt's power as he had, I would not have bought any cotton anyhow; it is not in my line. I have a vast respect for the economic law of price and I don't like to "rassle" with it. Old Man Price is a doughty, stubborn antagonist, given to unexpected moves. I wouldn't take him on even if I were President of the United States. But if anyone did buy cotton at 10 cents a pound, the price he could get for it today would be not 18 cents but somewhat over 8.

MEANWHILE the Government, at the present stage of its attempt to raise the price of cotton, finds itself owning some 7 million bales. That is a lot of cotton. It's about half a whole year's crop.

Lately I have been thinking about those 7 million bales of cotton held by the Government. It is what businessmen call "hanging over the market." So long as it hangs there, can the price of cotton go up materially? Businessmen would ordinarily say that no commodity can rise in price when there is a great quantity hanging over the market. By "hanging over the market" businessmen mean liable to be sold and thereby send prices down. True, in this case, the Administration wants prices to go up, and therefore presumably would not sell the cotton—though what else they can do with it as a permanent policy I can't imagine.

But if you rely on the Administration not selling that cotton, yet another reflection arises. It arises as a result of the recent election. Maybe this Administration would not sell that 7 million bales of cotton. But maybe this Administration won't be in power forever. Maybe it will be displaced by another in 1940. Even before that, a changed Congress might conceivably direct the present Administration to sell the cotton. I don't know what the Republicans, if they come into power, would do about that 7 million bales of cotton—except that it, and the whole farm problem, is likely to be a headache to them. But in any case, the disturbing reflection is that policies of Government about prices of commodities are subject to change in a way that policies of private owners are not.

THIS BRINGS US to another Administration policy about price. The Administration is loaning 57 cents a bushel on corn—in effect buying the corn—at a time when the price of corn is about 10 cents less than that—about 46 cents. With the corn owned by the Government hanging over the market, is the price of corn likely to rise materially.

The question whether Government should undertake to control prices is an important one, economically and politically. What the New Deal has tried, and failed at, might throw some light on the question. Authoritarian governments seem able to manage it—for a while. Yet I would not be surprised to see the Nazi price controls break down within six months or a year.

Sound Retreat!

By Barnet Nover

The Anglo-French Conversations

THE RETREAT from Munich is not yet a rout, but it threatens to become one. This was made evident at the meeting of French and British statesmen at Paris this week.

The original purpose of this reunion of Messrs. Chamberlain, Halifax, Daladier and Bonnet was to consider further ways and means of satisfying the dictators. Following the capitulation at Munich there were apparently inspired rumors that Great Britain and France were considering a reapportionment of colonial territories to please Hitler. There were also rumors, borne out in part by subsequent developments, that both the French and British governments would individually extend the olive branch to Mussolini.

Thus the "have-not" lions would lie down with the "have" lambs, a new regime of peace would be ushered in Europe, and it would become possible to beat the swords into ploughshares.

IT HAS NOT worked out that way. Neville Chamberlain for his part has given every indication of wanting to continue his policy of "appeasement" toward both Germany and Italy. He has warmly defended what he and his collaborators did at Munich. He has also rushed through Parliament the long-shelved accord with Italy.

France, for her part, has also not been behindhand. Soon after the Munich meeting the French government began negotiations with the Third Reich for a "no war" agreement similar to that which Chamberlain had made with Hitler. At the same time France formally recognized Italy's sovereignty in Ethiopia.

WHAT HAS been the result? For the past few weeks the German press, which prints only what the Nazi government permits it to print, has been carrying on a violent campaign of abuse against Great Britain. That was true even before the recent Jewish pogroms which bitterly antagonized British public opinion. Then, Nazi animus was directed against Anthony Eden, Winston Churchill, Duff Cooper and others who manifested a hostility to the Munich settlement. Since then the barrage of abuse has been directed at all things British.

Curiously enough, there have been no similar attacks on France and the French. But German restraint in this particular has not been characteristic of the other partner of the Berlin-Rome axis. The Italian press is now friendly toward Great Britain but is highly critical of Britain's ally.

IT IS APPARENT that the new four-power Concert of Europe isn't proving very harmonious. That might have been the case under the most favorable circumstances. But the situation in Europe, and particularly Germany, since Munich has hardly been conducive to harmony.

Public opinion in all democratic countries has not taken kindly to the violent anti-Semitic and anti-Catholic campaign in the Third Reich. The outcries have been so vehement that government officials have found it impossible to ignore them. To be sure, neither Prime Minister Chamberlain nor Premier Daladier has spoken out against the German developments the way President Roosevelt has done. But these statesmen have shown by certain actions that they were quite aware of the trend in public sentiment and did not disapprove of it. For instance, it was Chamberlain himself who announced the plan to set aside certain areas in Tanganyika, a former German colony, for German Jewish refugees. And the French government has made it clear that it was opposed to ceding any French colonies to the Third Reich.

AT PARIS this week the French and British statesmen reiterated their determination to oppose any colonial cessions to Germany at this time. But at the same time they agreed that the question of granting belligerent rights to Franco could not be taken up at this time.

This stand is somewhat surprising. It will hardly be conducive to good relations between France and Italy. It may also make a dead letter of the now-ratified Anglo-Italian agreement. For Mussolini wants the Spanish question disposed of quickly and to Franco's advantage and the postponing of the grant of a belligerent status to the insurgents will hardly help Mussolini's Spanish protege.

HERE AGAIN it was public opinion rather than the will of the statesmen that won the day. M. Daladier is having very hard sledding. The decree laws he recently promulgated have met with very considerable opposition from the labor unions. His political future is very much in doubt. When Parliament meets, his government's doom may be sounded, particularly if the Socialists, the largest party in the Chamber, carry out their threat of voting against him.

Faced by such intense opposition to his economic program, M. Daladier could hardly afford to antagonize the Left still further by a sell-out of Republican Spain. The most he can do to satisfy Mussolini he has already done, namely, to recognize Ethiopia as Italian and keep his Spanish policy on ice. But that will not be enough for Mussolini.

THE QUESTION arises whether it was this probability of continued bad weather in Franco-Italian relations that spurred M. Daladier on to conclude the "no-war" agreement with Germany. Perhaps. Another possible reason may be simply the fact that the French premier and foreign minister are still determined to continue the policy of appeasement as far as possible, despite the real obstacles that now stand in the way. In any event the reception which the prospective agreement has had in the French press shows that few Frenchmen take much stock in new paper pledges of peace. A large number of them regard it as either meaningless or unnecessary, if not actually dangerous.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Dramatic Review of a Hole in the Ground

(Suggested by the erection of a covered ramp to provide comfort for the excavation-watchers at Radio City, New York.)

Radio City's latest production, "Digging for Another," playing to capacity audiences at the Sidewalk Superintendent Club's Little Theater, is, we would say, adequate without being sensational or breath-taking. While not up to some previous productions of this class and in no way establishing new standards of originality, it holds interest throughout, and a long run is probable.

The performance is well executed, although there are flaws here and there. There is, in fact, a noticeable lack of smoothness by one or two steam shovels, but this will doubtless be remedied.

It is difficult, of course, to take a hole in the ground, install a vast cast of workingmen, mechanical apparatus, etc., and make it glamorous, yet this has been achieved by Mr. Rockefeller in some measure. Here and there the illusion of power and beauty is lost by too much concentration on mere cacophony. We think the blasting, for one thing, could be toned down.

There is a tendency to let the steam shovels get out of hand and hog the scene. The third steam shovel from the left was, we thought, much too obstreperous. It paid no attention to the general scheme of action, and persisted in performing very much on its own. This may have been due to greenness. We are inclined to think the operator has come up fresh from the amateur ranks and places too much emphasis on mere noise and gusto.

One of the best casts of derricks ever assembled graces the production. We can think of no producer who has done better. The derricks have a smartness seldom seen in this field, and, through faultless direction by Patrick J. O'Hollihan, who knows his derricks, they achieve that illusory quality, unity and charm.

A new derrick, the Ella B., operated by Gus Quiggle and discovered in the sticks, stops the show. Here is a real derrick, with an amazing vivacity and unusual talent. She was discovered in a small town near Oil City, Pa., working on a small tenement job, by Steve Portoporis, the well-known derrick expert, who has discovered so much fresh talent in this line. See her performance. It is distinctive and refreshing.

It is the longest performance in New York, not excluding the full-length "Hamlet." Mr. Rockefeller has done much for the comfort of audiences, but might well be a little more lavish and provide sandwiches and cocoa between the acts. Summing up, we would say that the production is better than "Site for the Empire State Building," the sensational performance of some years back, but not quite up to the original production of Radio City's "The Better 'Ole." See it by all means.

What Clergymen Read

Professor Billy Phelps, of Yale, speaking to Chicago businessmen, said that reading the newspapers and finding something interesting on every page made a man feel vital and alive. The first page is depressing in these days of great trouble, he said, but turning to the sports pages is great for giving one a sense of victory. "Clergymen and college professors always read the sport pages first," he said. Clergymen eat up stories of boxing because of the dominant note of triumph therein."

It sounds logical. And very likely a prize fighter, after a losing fight, reads the front pages first so he can see what's happened to China.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Long Tolerant of Office Flirtation, Staff Grows Restive When Girl Sits in Man's Lap; What to Think?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A group of girls would like your expression of opinion on the following questions: In our office for a period of more than a year, two co-workers, both married, both around 30, and both holding better-paid positions than ours, have been engaged in an office affair. The woman makes most of the advances. She goes to lunch with him when she can; hangs on his arm in the hall, telephones him on the slightest pretext, etc. This much we can stomach, and might even be willing to overlook it as none of our business. But when she coquettishly sits on his lap, we consider it a flagrant violation of office etiquette.

Like most office beaus, the man is flattered by her attentions, and seems to think that if "playful petting" is done in the presence of some one else, then the tenor of the act is irreproachable. We are not a bunch of prudish females, nor are we alleging downright misconduct, but we have become disgusted with their actions during office hours. Do you think our reaction is justified?

CO-WORKERS.

DEAR CO-WORKERS: Certainly your reaction of annoyance is justified. Boudoir conduct of the lap-sitting variety has no place outside the boudoir, and whoever would participate in so-degage a tableau in a business office, before the eyes of office associates, is virtually simian in his lack of emotional reticence. The primitive coarseness of feeling and behavior implicit in such conduct, in such surroundings, is what renders the spectacle so revolting to the involuntary witness of normal sensibilities. The latter's sense of self-respect is wounded at seeing his own kind stoop so low—committing the twin vulgarities of (a) making a public exhibition of his feelings, and (b) making deceptive sport of an emotional phenomenon which more civilized man has rightly learned to revere and protect from the gaze of the unconcerned.

You have not asked how to remedy the situation. Perhaps all you wanted was a statement of dispassionate opinion with which to confront and, possibly, shame into reform the bold-faced offenders. However, in the interests of office morale, it seems to me that more forthright steps should be taken to curb the nuisance. As a professional confrere of mine remarks (a man, by the way): "It's pretty detrimental to office efficiency for a staff to have to watch a playful petting party. It's not exactly conducive to concentrated thought or first-class production. I could hardly imagine a more distracting influence."

It seems to me that the first involuntary reaction of an outraged office force, habitually disturbed by such loutish by-play, would take the form of a barrage of disapproving glances—of the type generally known as "dirty looks"—pointedly aimed at the burlesquing pair. And if this rebuke failed to carry, I should think an outspoken protest would soon be registered by some more spirited member of the exasperated audience. Perhaps a general atmosphere of icy unawareness unanimously and automatically invoked when the couple embark on their monkeyshine routine, would teach them the lesson they need to learn. M. H.

A Dissatisfied Wife

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I want you to help me decide what to do. I have been married for 11 years. My daughter is 16 years old. My husband thinks he knows it all. He does not hesitate to pick me to pieces and mention faults which 50 other men would overlook. But when you tell him of his faults he gets angry and blazes up and you can't reason with him.

He goes out every night and does as he pleases. We are trying to buy our home and he likes to play cards. The only bills he is willing to pay are those for food, rent, electricity and gas. I have urged him to pay the doctor's bills a little at a time, but he won't listen. My mother lives with us and she says to overlook these things. It is awful to have to live with a man who won't let you speak of his faults.

He talks very nice to our daughter, but his tone is quite different with me. When there is company around he talks pleasantly to me for a change. I told him recently that I was going to get a job and he said: "Get yourself a day job and a night job, too." Should I leave him? Please advise me what to do. Thanking you, I am,

B. R.

In Defense of Husband

DEAR B. R.: This, I daresay, is a case of a nagging wife who has kept her rather slipshod husband on the defensive (possibly with more justification than tact) for so many years that he has acquired the habit of retaliating in kind; operating on the principle that "a good offensive is the best defensive," and heckling her continuously with the idea in mind of keeping the searchlight of criticism off himself.

No doubt this habitual cross-fire of fretful accusation, as well as the essential incompatibility of temperament which begot it, has gradually done to death whatever love blessed the union in the beginning, with the net result that each now cherishes an ill-concealed aversion to the other. In my opinion, the husband is not more to blame than the wife for the present unhappy situation. She is dissatisfied with his personality and performance, and he reciprocates the sentiment.

Weighing the evidence, it is rather to the man's credit that he manages to live on amicable terms with his daughter, and that his mother-in-law speaks up in his defense upon occasion. I think her suggestion that you overlook his faults is about the best advice that could be given. Nothing is to be gained by holding him up to scorn. Accept him for what he is; be grateful for the fact that he provides food and shelter for yourself and your loved ones; and by all means find yourself a job.

The change of scene and occupation that a job outside the home would provide might speedily cure your rather aggravated case of mental dyspepsia, and supply you with a new and more indulgent perspective on your husband. I don't think you would be at all justified in leaving him; any more than he would be justified in deserting you; and I think you might find yourself very definitely out of the frying pan and into the fire if you were to follow such a course. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Youthful Afternoon Frocks of Rich Velvet

Ask almost any debutante, college girl or matron what her favorite afternoon frock is and she will be sure to reply—"black velvet." The designs shown here are adaptable to varying types. The tea dansant frock below is of transparent velvet. Its shirred waistband is draped to blend with the demure square neckline outlined in starch lace. Correctly tailored is the two-piece Lyons type velvet, right, whose cardigan styled blouse is femininized by an Elizabethan standing collar of snowy lace. Chemical advancements in velvet manufacture have shown great progress during the last year. So improved are the new crush-resistant velvets that they may be trotted out to the cleaners an indefinite number of times without fear of losing their deep pile and luster. This scientifically cultivated crease-resistance has turned the newer velvets into ideal traveling companions as well as everyday party-going friends. Many of these velvets are thickly and closely piled, like the stiff, taffeta-backed French velvets, every yard of which costs a small fortune. Others are clinging, transparent and often threaded in gold or silver

Pictures Match Color Schemes

That's the newest hint in interior decorating notes from the Merchandise Mart, Chicago, where monotone pictures, the entire painting in shades of one primary color, have been introduced. If your living room has green as its most important color, your "monotone" may be a rose, executed in various shades of green, and with a green "mat" for a background. Other favored colors, to conform to modern schemes, include orchid, brown, burgundy, yellow, and blue.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

BOTANISTS have followed the lead of the workers on the ductless glands and are doing some remarkable things with plant hormones.

They can speed up the growth and maturation plants. They can increase the size of the roots or they can make the leaves and branches grow. They can take an old tree that is just about dying and by treatment make its roots begin to spread again, its branches to grow—a complete rejuvenation. And they do this with chemicals that apparently are not found, at least with any abundance, in the plant itself.

Plants, in fact, respond very much better to hormone treatment than animals. It was the dream of the endocrinologist of a few years ago that some results as those obtained on the old tree would be possible for man.

No Real Success

Attempts at rejuvenation with various ductless gland extracts and transplants have been made a-plenty, but up to now no real success can be reported. A good many old men have reported that they felt younger after the treatment, and for a while they may have acted younger. But they did not look younger, nor did their general experience serve to encourage those of us who are rapidly approaching the period of anecdotage. It is a lovely Faust-like dream to wish to remain young and some day it may be accomplished, but the experience of Faust, himself, would rather incline one not to try to play pranks on nature. Nature seems very determined that nothing is going to stop the process of aging generation after generation and removing them from the scene.

The other problem of masculinity and femininity also falls into the category of the ductless glands. Here, perhaps, more success can be reported. There are many people who, though definitely masculine, have a feminine trend. Their voices are high, the skin smooth, the hair silky and the deposits of fat have a feminine distribution. The condition seems to be a combination of pituitary and adrenal hormones affecting the gonads. And much success results from the proper administration of these extracts.

Chemical in Nature

Similarly, there are masculine women who probably have too much adrenal cortex tissue, as remarked in a previous article.

The question of sex seems to be quite chemical in nature. The phenomenon of free-martins is interesting in this respect. A cow may give birth to twin calves of opposite sex, each of which is normal. But occasionally the placentas are fused so that the blood streams of the two foetuses intermingle. In such cases the female shows considerable transformation toward the masculine form and remains sterile during life.

I read a report in the London Lancet that Mrs. Deansley and Parkes, of the National Institute for Medical Research, have conducted some experiments, putting transplants of active ovarian tissue under the skin of young male guinea pigs, thereby turning them into semi-females with enlargement of the mammary glands.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Nov. 25.

SOME PEOPLE have been able ot grow accustomed to young jitterbugs of both sexes, though I myself have not attained this breadth of spirit. But when I find, down in the depths of Tin Pan Alley, two little high school girls writing hit songs about June and lone moon and lonely nights, then I cease to worry about this younger generation. Since such children know nothing whatever about lonely nights, all is well. They are just little girls writing pieces—old-fashioned at 16.

They are Leah Wohlgemuth and Jean Barasch, seniors at James Madison High, over in Brooklyn. Their present song, "Lonely Nights," is already a hit on the air waves. They talk willingly about their collaboration, which has been going on for several months.

"We just started writing songs as a sort of hobby one day," said Leah, who writes the lyrics. "We never thought we'd take it seriously."

The way they got a hearing was a neighborhood friendship with the eminent band maestro, Mr. Russ Morgan. Mr. Morgan had an arrangement of the song made and then had his band play it. Thus the two young geniuses were on the road to fame and heartbreak. Jean was asked to recite the chorus. This is the way it goes. "These lonely nights, they bring back memories of you the night you whispered adieu, our romance was through."

Well, that's enough for a sample. And you can no longer convince me that our youth is in danger when two little high school kids can sit down and write such gibberish just for a hobby. Yes, all is well with our youth.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: In spite of bad times, the prices on divorce tags of the better type remain nice and high here, especially if the released male is sought in other quarters. Only the other day the beautiful Jayne Shadduck is said to have priced a possible divorce from her handsome millionaire husband, Bob Topping, at $500,000—cash. Isn't it nice to know that with everything going to pot, divorce prices can stay so divinely high . . .

As though we didn't already have enough night clubs, they are getting ready to open a new one called The Road to Mandalay, which is a pretty old-fashioned handle for 1938. However, they are spending over $130,000 to get the place ready for its opening, at which Mr. Harry Richman will be the star and little Miss Adelaide Moffett, the social canary, will also sing. Seems to me an awful lot of money and effort just to open one more night club in this already over-entertained town.

Among the various exotic dances imported this year in remarkable numbers, one from Brazil, called the Samba, seems to be making some headway among people with educated feet. There has been an unusual rush of these imported steps this year, but few have lasted more than a week or two. As I always say, the polka is best after all . . .

We are all happy over the news that Fredric March and his wife, Florence Eldridge, are coming back to Broadway this winter in another try at the drama that talks. They will have the leading roles in "The American Way," by those old hit writers, George Kaufman and Moss Hart . . .

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Rogues' Gallery

Thief

Mrs. Horatio Gibble is scrupulously honest in all of her dealings,
If she owes you a dime, she will wake up in the night to worry about it,
But she will call on the telephone,
Just when you are busiest,
And go on and on about all of her doings and those of her family,
Or she will come to your house and sit complacently in kitchen or parlor,
Haranguing, repeating, about this thing or that while with nerves that are jerking,
You feel the onrush of time and could scream out in terror,
"Pickpocket avaunt! Spare me life's dearest treasure!"

Burglar

Mrs. Ferdinand Perky is a most punctilious woman about many matters,
She would die before she would open one of your letters or even hold it up to the window,
Or peek into your drawer,
Or walk into your house uninvited,
But by bold indirection (if that fails, she gets brazen)
She will invade your reserves of mind, body and spirit,
She will query and probe, or ask impertinent questions
Until often you long to draw out a faithful six-shooter,

Gangster

Mrs. Emmeline March is a woman with a commendable public conscience,
She starts reform movements to free her fair city from rackets,
She believes that democracy must be upheld,
And that freedom is precious
Yet once in her toils your life becomes completely of her designing.
You must go here and there, you must do this thing and that,
You must join this group or that one, serve on every committee,
You can only escape her by moving away, for you can't very well prefer charges

Killer

Mrs. Augustine Smartby is one of the most humanitarian of women in impersonal matters.
She is generous of purse, and she helps all those who are needy and lowly,
She would not hurt a fly,
At least if she could help it.
But she will say to you frankly things that shrivel the tendrils
Of hope in your soul, that quench the embers of faith in yourself
With her weapons of words, she will maim—even slay you
Until you would call the police, charge in sheer desperation,
"Here's an enemy at large—an assassin of spirit."

Snow Suits Worn To School by Sub-debs

New York, (AP).—The trend for intriguing touches appears in the snow suits which many sub-debs wear to school when winter comes. Some jackets are lined with bright calico, others banded in vivid Indian braid and still others topped with peaked hoods tied with plaited thread "hair braids."

Christmas party frocks are colorful, too, but a bit restrained in design to please the sub-deb's mother who objects to extreme effects. They are made of light taffetas and nets and designed with full skirts, puffed sleeves or draped shoulders and decolletages which are neither high nor low.

Your Figure

Short Skirts Make Small Women Dumpy

Legs May Be Handicap Up-and-Down Lines Aid Panels Add to Height

By Ida Jean Kain.

FIVE YEARS ago the chances are that you did not dress to suit your type and that you looked ten years older than you do today. Since those five years the individual type—rather than the style of the moment—has been given first consideration. We have learned that clothes can make years of difference in the appearance.

Of all the types, probably the one that benefits most from the right clothes is that type to which 65 per cent of the American women belong: Five feet 4 inches or less in height and described either as "petite" or "short and stocky." We can't help being short, but we abhor the term stocky, for it conveys the idea of the middle-aged figure.

Wear Up-and-Down Lines

Designers, who know the knack of making any figure look better than it is, can even make the short figure appear taller and slimmer, and I want to group for you some of their secrets. You can know that these style tips are right, for they come from such famous designers as Milo Anderson and Orry Kelly, whose creations are worn by the beautiful film stars; from Winifred Orviette, style forecaster and authority, and from Mrs. Raymond Ives, nationally known magazine writer.

First, some general rules for this type . . . The short woman should buy only clothes in which up-and-down lines are emphasized. Regardless of current lengths, the skirt should not be too short, or the effect will be that of humpty-dumpty. The waistline should be fairly high, to make the skirt appear longer.

If you have a short neck, never wear round necks, high necks or choker beads, or your neck will appear thick. Best for you are the V neck or oval neckline. And don't highlight a double chin with a round, shiny collar!

The belt should be narrow, the same color as the dress and never shiny. Always stand up when buying a hat, to see the full effect of your silhouette. No pancake hats for the short woman and, whatever you do, avoid turned-down brims!

Don't Fuss With Your Hair

Milo Anderson, who designs for such beauties as Bette Davis, Kay Francis and Margaret Lindsay, says that the important thing for any woman to remember when buying clothes is this: "Study the lines that are best for your figure. Don't be fussing with your hair or powdering your nose."

Orry Kelly, famous for his Hollywood creations, works on the surprising theory of covering up your good points. "Suppose," he says, "that you have beautiful legs but your waistline is too large. Wearing a short skirt to show the legs merely emphasizes the size of the waist." We must admit he has something there!

Winifred Orviette says that the large woman should aim to look important through the use of simple lines and excellent fabrics. She suggests that size can be cut down by the use of a panel which begins at the neck, tapers toward the waist and runs the length of the dress.

Mrs. Raymond Ives has some advice for the thin girl: Wear your clothes snug. Do not try to wear them too close, in the hope that you will appear larger—that makes you look emaciated and pathetic.

Style authorities agree that clothes should never be snug, however, when you are trying to conceal avoirdupois. Do not have your dress too tight through the armholes, or one that pulls tight across the hips and abdomen.

2 Gay Parties Mark Debut of Jane Rust

Bow Made at F St. Club Dance at Bakers' Later
Over 100 Guests Attend

Miss Jane Rust, pretty daughter of the Harry Lee Rusts, who has been studying at Goucher College this year, abandoned her books long enough to figure prominently in two of the gayest parties of the holiday season yesterday. The first was a tea dance at the 1925 F Street Club, which her parents gave in her honor, and later she was feted at a small dance at which Mr. and Mrs. Rust entertained with Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Baker.

Both older and younger people mingled at the first function, while the dance, which was held at the beautiful Baker home on Foxhall road, was attended mostly by friends of the debutante and their escorts.

F Street Club Banked With Flowers

Miss Rust proved an exception among this year's debs by NOT receiving in front of a screen wired with chrysanthemums. Instead, the many flowers which had been sent to her were arranged in vases and bowls on the tables and piano at the club.

Miss Rust and her family welcomed their guests just inside the drawing room door. Miss Rust's gown, of velvet in an off-white shade, was made with a full skirt and a very tight jacket, with puffed sleeves and tiny velvet buttons up the front. She carried a quaint, old-fashioned bouquet in which white flowers predominated. Mrs. Rust wore a long black gown with a bodice of crimson lame and a doll's hat made entirely of one black ostrich plume.

Dancing took place in the enclosed porch, which is used as a dining room, and a bar had been set up in a smaller room. The food for which the club has become noted, such as open-faced turkey sandwiches, was served during the afternoon.

Assisting the debutante were several of her fellow-buds, including her cousin, Miss Mary Rust of Leesburg, Va., and the Misses Anne Underwood, Roberta Quirk, Margaret Craighill, and Jacqueline Meredith. Mrs. Rust was assisted by Mrs. Baker, Mrs. Grant Rafter, Mrs. John Wentworth, Mrs. Henry C. Rowland, Mrs. Thomas E. Lewis, Mrs. Langhorne Bond and Mrs. Howard Sutherland.

Several friends of the debutante, who are visiting her over the holidays in her parents' apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue, were also present. They included Miss Margaret Lewis, of New York; H. Coleman Tilly, of Philadelphia, and Ira B. Wheeler, of Greenfield, Mass. Also at the party were several members of the rather extensive Rust family: Mrs. W. W. Peirce and her daughter, Miss Eleanor Peirce; Miss Margaret Rust, of Leesburg; Miss Mary Nelson Lee, and the Misses Eleanor and Caroline Rust.

Dance Lasts Till Small Hours

The entire lower floor of the Baker home had been turned over for the dance later in the evening. More than 100 young persons made merry there to the strains of Sidney's orchestra until early this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Rust received in the drawing room before masses of chrysanthemums in tawny shades.

Among those present were the young ladies who had assisted Miss Rust at her debut party, and several other debutantes, including Miss Maisie Howard, Miss Ann Wilkinson, Miss Elise Hill and Miss Peggy Townsend.

Others were the Second Secretary of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Zuberbuhler, Miss Eleanor Meem, Miss Austine McDonnell, of Hollywood fame; Miss Alice Barry and, in the stag line, Samuel Biddle, Pio Correa, of the Brazilian Embassy; Cuthbert and Middleton Train, Randall Hagner, and Counts Oleg and Igor Cassini, and many more.

Hessler Studio.

Miss Jane Rust, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lee Rust, jr., made her bow to society at two parties on yesterday's calendar. She was feted first at a tea given by her parents at the 1925 F Street Club, and was later honor guest at a small dance given by Mr. and Mrs. Rust and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Baker at the latters' home on Foxhall road

Miss Mary Wells And Fiance Feted

Miss Mary Wells and Rudolph Kauffmann II, who will be married this afternoon at the Church of the Epiphany, were honor guests at a dinner given last evening at the Sulgrave Club by the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Max Kauffmann of Chevy Chase.

The guests included members of the wedding party.

Hundreds Attend Two Sisters Assist Many Debs Present

By Elizabeth Henney.

Neither the ice nor snow of wintry Washington could chill the warmth with which the "Old Guard" of Washington welcomed Miss Marjorie Sherley into their midst when she made her formal bow to society yesterday afternoon. Youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Swagar Sherley, she was presented by her parents at a tea that drew hundreds of guests to their home in Rock Creek Park.

In the drawing room, which was banked with roses and chrysanthemums and the multitude of bouquets presented to the debutante, Miss Sherley received with her mother. Mrs. Sherley wore a moyen age gown of aquamarine blue and silver brocade, whose tones reflected the exquisite aquamarine in her necklace. An orchid corsage was pinned at the shoulder.

The debutante was gowned in white brocade with a silver thread running through the material. It was made on simple lines with a square neck and puffed sleeves and at her throat she wore a single strand of pearls. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet outlined with lace paper and filled with sweetheart roses and white bouvardia.

Sister Assists The Debutante

Mrs. Andrew B. Young, of Philadelphia, the former Olive Sherley, who made her debut here some years ago, and who came down just for her young sister's party, assisted during the afternoon. She wore a gown of turquoise blue velvet, shirred at the waist and with a full accordion-pleated skirt. The shade of her gown was matched by her necklace, which was a gold, turquoise and enamel snake, which coiled about her throat. On her shoulder were pinned two pink camellias.

Mrs. Charles Acker, the former Mignon Sherley, another sister, who was also assisting, wore a figured tea gown with a soft yellow quilted jacket and a corsage of gardenias.

By far the most popular spot at the party was the table where a large and lucious ham reposed. After many of the guests mentioned that it was the best ham they ever had tasted, Mr. Sherley explained that the reason it was so good was because it was a Kentucky ham. Mr. Sherley, who was Representative in Congress from Kentucky for 16 years, certainly proved to his guests that they knew how to cure ham down there.

Debutantes who assisted during the afternoon were Miss Jacqueline Meredith, Miss Lalla Harrison, Miss Mary Alice White, Miss Anne Underwood, Miss Olive Pearson, of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, and Miss Marjorie Tonner, of Torresdale, Pa. Miss Carol Tonner, who is now at school at Pine Manor, had expected to be there, but owing to the recent weather difficulties will not arrive in town until noon today.

A Dozen Hostesses Alternate at Tea Table

At the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. Neville Miller, Mrs. Cresson Newbold, Mrs. William Tonner of Philadelphia; Mrs. Charles F. Wilson, Mrs. John S. Flannery, Mrs. W. B. Munson, Mrs. Mary Stewart, Mrs. Daniel Devore, Mrs. Ord Preston, Mrs. Lawrence Groner and Mrs. Duncan Phillips.

Seen here and there among the guests were Mrs. Harry Covington, Mrs. Everett Meigs, Mrs. Fred J. Essary, Miss Rosalind Wright, Miss Eleanor Preston, Miss Julie Cahill, Miss Nancy Hoskinson, Miss Betty Fischer, Miss Barbara Henning, Mr. and Mrs. Cabot Stevens, Miss Peggy Essary, Miss Mary Dora Thompson, Miss Margaret Jeschke, and the Misses Margaret and Claire Cotter, dressed alike in plum-colored frocks and hats.

Also among the guests were Mrs. Joseph Strauss, Dr. and Mrs. Ze Barney Phillips, Dr. and Mrs. Oliver T. Hart, Dr. and Mrs. Charles T. Warner, Mrs. Daniel De Vore, Mrs. Charles Bradley, Mrs. Thomas Bradley, Mrs. Edward Parker, Capt. and Mrs. James O. Gawne, Miss Maisie Howard, Mrs. Frederick R. Solger and Mrs. Austin Kautz.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE RUGGED PIONEER SPIRIT is still abroad in Washington society, it seems. Unable to corral a taxi, because of the snow, some of those invited to Mrs. McCeney Werlich's tea yesterday afternoon arrived by bus or even on foot.

DUDLEY HARMON.

The party was for her brother, Robert Hinckley, who visits his sister here for several days every year. The guest of honor looked very en fete yesterday, wearing a slightly withered corsage of tea roses which Patricia Morris had given him, as a joke, from some of the many flowers sent to her for her debut on Thanksgiving Day.

ALTHOUGH all of her friends urge her to take a smaller house in Georgetown or an apartment somewhere, Mrs. Werlich still clings to the red brick family residence on Sixteenth street. She grew up in this house, which is so large that a small dance could take place in the dining room and not be heard in the living room in front of the house. On the walls are many pictures by her father, a well-known artist.

Mrs. Werlich got up her party very informally, asking people as she saw them in the past day or two. Everybody gathered in the dining room, which is enormous enough to house an entire family. All the furniture has been there for several generations and has quite a reassuring air of solidity. A big vase of yellow chrysanthemums was in the center of the table.

Mrs. Werlich wore a red velvet dress and carried a silver fox wrap about with her. Her brother dispensed punch from a huge silver bowl—everything about the house seems to be on a vast scale and there was whisky and soda, cocktails, tea and the usual 5 to 7 food.

Pretty Mrs. Eldridge Jordan was among the guests, all in black with two fresh white chrysanthemums on her shoulder. She chatted with Capt. L. G. A. Saint John Curzon-Howe, Naval Attache of the British Embassy, who can't understand why the Americans are so fascinated by his name. He and Mrs. Hope—she wore a black frock and fur jacket—will be off early today on the Navy special for the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia.

WE ALSO SAW popular Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, the latter in a mink cape over her dress. Captain and Mrs. Herbert Howard were there, Mrs. Howard wearing a stunning henna colored suit with sleeves trimmed with beaver.

Mrs. Elbridge Durbrow, who is finishing her studies at Vassar this year, refusing to let marriage interfere with her degree, looked lovely in a skunk jacket over a black frock and a tiny black hat with a large quill. She is spending the holidays with her mother, Mrs. Emily Meade Moore.

Others there included Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, another in the fur-jacket contingent; Countess Bohdan de Castellane, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman; Miss Laura Tuckerman in a green tailored suit; Robert Coe, Mrs. Sol Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom, just returned from New York; Mrs. Duncan Cameron, William K. Ryan and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles Courtney.

ODDS AND ENDS: Rebecca Wellington spent Thanksgiving with Mrs. William C. Eustis and Mr. and Mrs. David Finley at Oatlands, their place near Leesburg, and will return there for the week-end after a few hours in town this morning . . . Larry Baker, now in Hollywood, will join his parents, the Laurence Bakers, for Christmas . . . The retiring Japanese Ambassador, Hirosi Saito, will stay on in Washington an indefinite time after his successor arrives at the embassy. Continuing poor health is given as the reason.

NOT CONTENT only with a degree from the University of Warsaw, Mme. Chramiec, wife of the Military Attache of the Polish Embassy, is getting her master's from George Washington in psychology and education.

Diplomats Crowd Boxes at Ball of Nations

Scholarships Drawn Colorful Figures Big Receiving Line

By Elizabeth Ford.

Diplomats were en rapport at the Ball of Nations last evening at the Mayflower Hotel. A large block of them commandeered boxes and applauded when the names of those securing scholarships were taken from the urn at midnight.

Promptly at 10:30, the receiving line drew up and prepared to greet the guests who, if they were not on time, lost the opportunity of meeting Mme. John Pelenyi, wife of the Hungarian Minister; Mme. Emmanuel Lombard, wife of the French Military Attache; Signora Valeria Cosmelli, wife of the Italian Counselor; Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Mrs. M. L. Wilson, Mrs. Ernest G. Griffith, wife of the dean of the graduate school of American University; Mrs. Ellery C. Stowell, Edgar Morris, Dr. and Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins and Mrs. Arthur C. Christie, wife of the president of the board of trustees of American University.

Dr. Christie Draws Winners

With practically everybody on hand by 11:15, the program whirled into action with a Scotch reel. Among those taking part were Miss Anne Moorehead, Malcolm Ross and Ted Dominick.

Then the spotlight picked out Dr. Arthur C. Christie, who stuck a finger in the urn and pulled out the scholarship winners for 1938-39. Those selected in this manner will come to the United States from foreign countries to study for a year on the social sciences.

After this diversion, the square-dancers, wearing overalls and gingham, "came round the mountain." Among those taking part in this group were Mr. and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, Miss Barbara Wright, John Dreier, Oliver Gasch and Mr. and Mrs. Foster Adams.

Waltz Pageant Steals Show

Then arrived the breathless moment of the evening, when the Winterhalter Pageant took the floor. Scholarships Drawn Colorful Figures Big Receiving Line

By Elizabeth Ford.

Diplomats were en rapport at the Ball of Nations last evening at the Mayflower Hotel. A large block of them commandeered boxes and applauded when the names of those securing scholarships were taken from the urn at midnight.

Promptly at 10:30, the receiving line drew up and prepared to greet the guests who, if they were not on time, lost the opportunity of meeting Mme. John Pelenyi, wife of the Hungarian Minister; Mme. Emmanuel Lombard, wife of the French Military Attache; Signora Valeria Cosmelli, wife of the Italian Counselor; Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Mrs. M. L. Wilson, Mrs. Ernest G. Then the spotlight picked out Dr. Arthur C. Christie, who stuck a finger in the urn and pulled out the scholarship winners for 1938-39. Those selected in this manner will come to the United States from foreign countries to study for a year on the social sciences.

After this diversion, the square-dancers, wearing overalls and gingham, "came round the mountain." Among those taking part in this group were Mr. and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, Miss Barbara Wright, John Dreier, Oliver Gasch and Mr. and Mrs. Foster Adams.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

ALTHOUGH THE weather made hunting a minus quantity on Thanksgiving—the first time in the memory of man that no pack was out on that day—the hunt breawfast at Foxcroft enlivened the calendar as much as usual and drew shoals of visitors from Washington, Maryland, and all over Virginia.

The famous Fox and Hound Hall was filled with guests who sat at long tables where a typical Thanksgiving menu, complete with hot gumbo soup, roast pig, turkey, ham, plum pudding and coffee, was served. Among the notables seen there were Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Beach and their guest, Mrs. Dorothy B'Oench, and Mrs. Richard Shands, of Washington. Parents of Foxcroft students who were present included Mr. and Mrs. Elliot Cross, of Boston; Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. du Pont, of Wilmington, Del.; Mr. and Mrs. George Humphrey, of Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ordway, of Battle Creek, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Deere Winan, of Chicago, and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Ryding, of Birmingham, Ala.

AFTER BREAKFAST, everyone went over to the gymnasium for the exciting basketball game between the Foxes and the Hounds, which ended in a score of 31 to 10 in favor of the Hounds. Miss Charlotte Noland, headmistress of Foxcroft, presented the large silver cup to the winners. The galleries of the gymnasium were crowded with spectators.

Mr. and Mrs. Pierrepont Moffatt, of Washington, were there to see their niece, Margaret White, participate in the game. Dr. and Mrs. Truman Lawrence Saunders and Truman Lawrence Saunders, jr., of New York, also were there. Still others in the crowd included Mr. and Mrs. William Deering Howe, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gambrill, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shepard and Dr. Walter Wicks, of Maryland.

A number of old Foxcroft girls, who are well known here, came back for the week-end. Among them were Mrs. Albert Ely, who was accompanied by Mr. Ely, of Washington; Mrs. Alex Paterson and Mr. Paterson, of Montreal, Canada; Mrs. John Gould, his former Miss Lee Higginson, of Boston, and many others.

AFTER THE GAME, Miss Noland entertained at her home, The Covert, for the parents of the girls who are members of the Foxes and Hounds teams and invited many friends in to meet them. Much interest is taken in the basketball games at Foxcroft as the girls fox hunt one day a week with the Middleburg Hunt and are well known by the hunting set.

All homes in the country have been thrown open for visitors the last two days, and while the weather kept hunting off the calendar, there have been more dinners and overnight house parties than usual. Hunting country residents who ventured out the last two days found roads blocked with automobiles. Wrecking trucks have been doing a record business since the snow fell, and on one well-known hill in these parts there were almost 300 automobiles stretched for miles in a tangle on Thanksgiving night.

Baron Paul Schell, of the Hungarian Legation, on his way from Washington to a dinner party given by Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane on Thursday evening, was driving a car that slipped into a ditch where it remained while friends drove him on to Brookmeade.

Drama Club Polishing Up 1st Offering

To Be Given Friday
Title 'Call It a Day'
Rehearsals Under Way

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The Georgetown Dramatic Club, formed October 12 in the rectory of Christ Church, is putting finishing touches on its first production, "Call It a Day," which it will present Friday in Linthicum Hall.

The new club in Old Georgetown is laregly a cave dwellers' society and has at its head Mrs. Horace Torbert, former program chairman of the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women. Mrs. Torbert is directing its initial play, the three-act comedy by Dodie Smith, which was a Broadway success a season ago. It will not be her first production in Georgetown for she staged the big pageant given by the residents there about ten years ago.

The club members are rehearsing regularly at the Christ Church parish hall, Thirty-first and O streets, and are designing and building their own sets. "Call It a Day," incidentally, requires nine changes of scene, offering plenty of opportunity for the architects and artists in the group to do a generous share of work on the first play.

Miss Lucia Hollerith Chairman of Design

Miss Lucia Hollerith is chairman of stage design. Mrs. Robert Goodale, who did much painting for the Bal Boheme of the Arts Club last winter, is assisting as vice chairman. Walter Peter, jr., assisted by Richard Deane, has designed the sets.

The cast and committees, after taking time out over Thanksgiving, met at the parish hall again last night to "dig in" on the final week of work. Mrs. Torbert and members of the cast, intent on lines and action, were busy in the auditorium, while in an adjoining room the scenery designers were working, doing their lines with brushes and paints and going into action with hammers and screwdrivers.

Many Included In Cast of Play

The principal roles are being taken by Phyllis Frisby, as Dorothy, the mother; Henry S. Matthews, jr., as Roger, the father; Mrs. Richard Ihlder, as Ann; Miss Katherine Frie, as Catherine; Bill Yelverton, as Martin, are the three children. Others in the cast are Winifred Thornton, Mrs. Gillespie Armstrong 3d, Miss Lillian Lawyer, Miss Christine Merritt, Miss Emily Ball, Miss Mary Tolson, George Blackwell, Richard Ihlder and Harrington Prindle.

Mrs. J. Edward Burrough is chairman of tickets.

Old Linthicum Hall, where the play is to be given, is the scene of another all-Georgetown activity, the assembly, which also includes many of the cave dwellers and is held annually.

Bridge to Feature Unitarian Bazaar

A bridge luncheon will be a feature of the first day at the Unitarian bazaar to be held at All Souls' Unitarian Church, Sixteenth and Harvard streets, November 30 to December 1. Mrs. R. L. Hebbard will serve the luncheon, and afterward Mrs. J. M. Doran will have bridge tables arranged in the parlor. Prizes will be given, and a unique method has been planned for their distribution.

Mrs. H. Y. Dawkins is planning a booth for flowers and plants for which Mrs. R. H. Higgins has provided a large number of dainty little winter gardens.

The delicatessen committee chairman, Mrs. Frank B. Steele, is providing an unlimited number of good things for the table, among them, mincemeat.

Thronton W. Burgess

At Paddy's Pond

A ready tongue may weave a spell,
But he gains most who listens well.
— Old Mother Nature.

That saying is true. It is the good listener who then makes the most of what he hears that gains most in this world. So you will find that many of the people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadow are rather silent folk, but folk who make good use of their ears. They know what is going on about them while at the same time keeping their affairs from their neighbors.

The arrival of Honker the Goose and his flock at the pond of Paddy the Beaver was no secret. It was known all through the Green Forest and even beyond. The fact is those Geese had broadcast the news, and keen ears on all sides had heard and understood. The Geese are noisy folk at times and their voices carry far. Often you may hear them when you cannot see them. It sometimes seems as if the more tired they are the more they gabble, and they had been very, very tired as they approached the pond of Paddy the Beaver.

Now, ever since that pond was made it had been a meeting place for many of the people of the Green Forest. Some come to drink. Some come to bathe and some come to see who else is there and in the hope of surprising a dinner. And I suspect that some come out of idle curiosity. So Paddy and Mrs. Paddy never are lonesome. Indeed, there are times when they would, I suspect, prefer fewer visitors.

So while the flock remained that little pond in the Green Forest was extremely popular. Honker decided to remain there for two or three days until the flock was thoroughly rested and fit to resume the long journey. It was a splendid place to rest. No hunters with terrible guns would come there. True, there was little food, but it was not a great distance to the Big River, and over there was food in plenty at certain places along the shore.

So daily the flock, with the exception of one, flew out to the Big River to feed, then returned to the pond to rest. The one who didn't go was the laggard who had arrived so long after the flock and had been so used up that he had been unable to clear the top of the tree on the bank and had literally fallen into the pond. The next day when the flock had risen to go to the Big River to feed he had tried to rise with them and couldn't. One wing was so stiff that he couldn't use it. No, sir, he simply couldn't use it no matter how he tried. Then, too, his side pained him. You see he had been shot the day before. That was why he had been a laggard. He had managed to keep flying then, but now stiffness had set in and he simply could not get off the water.

Fortunately, there was food enough for a lone Goose to be found there, so he would not have to go hungry. Anyway, he didn't have much appetite that day. He felt too miserable to be hungry, and quite as hard to bear as the pain was the feeling of helplessness. It scared him. Yes, sir, it scared him. While the others were gone he remained right out in the middle of the pond most of the time. He felt safer and he was safer there. No enemy could steal up on him and catch him by surprise.

Now it was astonishing how quickly it became common knowledge among the visitors to the pond that something was wrong with the young gander. Of course those who had seen him attempt to fly when the flock left had known instantly that he was hurt and could not fly. But others had guessed almost as quickly. The fact that he was there alone was enough. Geese are social folk. They want company of their own kind. They seldom are alone if they can help themselves. Their neighbors know this. Their enemies know it. To see Longlegs the Heron alone would arouse no suspicion that anything might be wrong with him. He usually is alone. He prefers to be. But a Goose alone suggests right away that something is wrong.

So the young gander became an object of interest, of very great interest, to several people whose interest he would much rather not have had at all. He didn't know this, and that was just as well. He would have felt worse than he did. There are times when lack of knowledge is a blessed thing.

Donation Day Fete Held for Methodist Aged

300 Attend Affair
Mrs. Marlow in Charge
53 Are in Institution

More than 300 persons—weather to the contrary notwithstanding—attended the annual fall donation day at the Methodist Home for the Aged yesterday. Tables arranged in the dining room were piled high with staple groceries and linens, and there were generous cash donations for the maintenance of the institution, on Connecticut avenue, at Ellicott street.

The home now has 53 residents, both men and women, and is supported by the 30 churches of the Methodist denomination in the District and nearby Maryland. Mrs. Harry Hoskinson is president of the women's board, under whose auspices yesterday's affair was planned.

The donation day inaugurated a series of events planned in observance of the fiftieth anniversary of the home's founding. The next will be the jubilee dinner of the workers' council, set for January 11, at which a report will be made of the progress toward the goal of paying off the remainder of the mortgage on the building. No announcement of the amount already contributed was made yesterday, but money is coming in rapidly and the board is now planning a much needed elevator and a new hospital unit for the institution.

In addition to the donations from the various churches, there were tables of fancy articles which will be sold to swell the funds in the treasury. One of these was a table arranged annually by members of the home family. There were aprons, handkerchiefs, crocheted and embroidered articles and dolls already dressed. In addition, attractive wares were donated by merchants on Connecticut avenue. Mrs. Mary B. Frye and Miss Willie C. English, of the home family, were in charge of the sale.

Mrs. W. W. Marlow was general chairman of arrangements for the donation day, assisted by a large committee and the superintendent, Mrs. Lucretia Knoke.

A musical program was presented by Mrs. Carolyn Nordica Bost, soprano, who has sung for the home on several other occasions, and by the Schubert Singers, under the direction of Mrs. Chester Adair.

Tea was served in the afternoon, with Mrs. E. H. Charrington and Mrs. Walter S. Harben, chairmen of the tea room and members of the Methodist Ministers' Wives Association, pouring. These included Mrs. G. Ellis Williams, wife of the District superintendent; Mrs. R. H. Stone, president of the association; Mrs. John R. Edwards, Mrs. John E. Fort, Mrs. W. M. Michael, Mrs. C. H. Corkran, Mrs. Chesteen Smith, and Mrs. Ralph D. Smith.

Baroness Nordenfelt is widely known in her country for her interest in the cause of equal rights for women. She is on her first visit to America and has been the guest of her cousin, Elsa Brandstrom Ulrich, wife of Dr. Ulrich, professor of graduate education at Harvard. Mrs. Ulrich was with her father in Russia during the closing years of the Czarist regime when he was the Swedish Ambassador there, and during the war was called the "White Angel of Siberia," because of her work among the soldiers there.

Baroness Nordenfelt and Mrs. Fries remained in Washington until today to confer with Miss Alice Paul, president of the International Woman's Party, who is returning from New Jersey, where she spent Thanksgiving. They leave this evening for Virginia to stop at the State University, in Williamsburg and in Monticello.

Hostesses at the tea yesterday afternoon were Miss Martha Souder and Mrs. Helen Hunt West, of headquarters, Mrs. Horace Pote, chairman of the D. C. branch of the party, and Mrs. Karl Greene, chairman of hospitality for the D. C. branch.

Sale of Books and Toys to Raise Funds for Children's Art Gallery

Mrs. Slocum Kingsbury Heads Committee
Special Literature for Backward Youngsters
Playthings Tend to Stimulate Imagination

A sale of books and educational toys for children will be held Wednesday to Saturday of next week by the sponsors committee of the Children's Art Gallery. Mrs. Slocum Kingsbury, chairman of the committee, succeeding Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, is in charge of the sale, which will be conducted at 1625 Connecticut avenue.

Toys will be sold by the sponsors on a commission. Some are being provided by the National Child Research Center and others by a firm which manufactures educational playthings. There will also be books, including a special shelf devoted to those designed for children who are behind in their reading. These are such exciting tales as "Treasure Island" written down in simple language appealing to a child with reading disabilities.

Mrs. Kingsbury, who is also a member of the Progressive Education Association, said the sponsors hoped to perform a double service in assembling educational toys, in solving the problem of parents who want such playthings for children at Christmas and in raising funds for the Children's Gallery.

Gallery Reveals Talent of Children

The gallery, located at 818 Independence avenue, shows the work of children all over the country. Pictures are well hung and reveal surprising talent among the boys and girls.

It was established about three years ago as one of the Federal Art Projects, wich are headed in this section by Russell Parr. Philip Bell directs the gallery and the sponsors' committee provides art materials for the underprivileged children who receive instruction there.

The art project develops ability in children just as do the educational toys, Mrs. Kingsbury pointed out. The child should have playthings with which he can re-create the world about him. He should be able to mold or shape with the hands familiar objects, build, with blocks, things he sees on the street and have boats which can be pushed about on the floor if there is no water in which to float them. Such toys, she says, stimulate his imagination and his thinking. Those which parents are apt to select—the kind which you wind up and sit and watch—do nothing but provide momentary diversion.

Sponsors' Committee Has Many Members

Members of the sponsors' committee include, in addition to Mrs. Kingsbury, Mrs. Strong, William Jarvis, who is treasurer; Mrs. Harry C. January, Mrs. William Mayfarth, Eugene Weisz, Miss Peggy Duffy, Miss Portia Oberly, Mrs. Lawrence M. C. Smith, Mrs. George Oakley Totten, Dr. John P. Foley, James B. Herring, Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Miss Alice Coe Mendham, Miss De Graffenreid Woolley, Mrs. Avery Coonley, Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenburg, Mrs. Michael W. Straus and Mrs. W. R. Winslow.

data furnished in accordance with paragraph 1 (5) of the instructions as to financial statements in the instruction book for form 24, has affirmatively stated that there are no losses on loans and discounts not provided for," the commission said.

Form 24 must be used by holding firms in filing registration statements with the SEC.

Pay of Chairman

Another item which the commission charged was "materially misleading" related to remuneration of officers and directors. The statement purportedly showed that A. P. Giannini, then chairman of the board, received recompense of $1 for 1936. The commission contends that he received at least $65,914 which he allegedly withdrew from a balance of $792,000 placed to his credit by a subsidiary of Transamerica Corporation.

Tracing this credit account, the commission said it had "reasonable grounds" to believe that on January 29, 1930, the sum of $1,400,000 was placed on the books of Bankitaly Co. of America, then a subsidiary of Transamerica Corporation, to A. P. Giannini's credit. The commission alleged that of this total all but $792,000 had been paid to Giannini by September, 1931, "at which time counsel of the then existing management of Transamerica Corporation advised that further payment would be illegal."

The commission further alleged that subsequent to a change in management in 1932, Giannini withdrew from the balance of $792,000 the sum of $134,826.58 in 1932, $132,906.92 in 1933, $100,596.24 in 1934; $251,952.03 in 1935 and $65,914.28 in 1936, making his total withdrawals from the original credit to his account of $1,294,186.05.

The SEC also charged that an explanation of a transaction involving $35,214,000 of certain "unsatisfactory" assets of Bank of America N. T. & S. A. was also "so unclear as to be materially misleading."

Taking up the balance sheet of Transamerica Corporation as of December 31, 1936, the commission claimed it was materially misleading insofar as it effected the relationship between the corporation and a subsidiary, Associated American Distributors, Inc., which was engaged in soliciting orders to purchase Transamerica Corporation stock on the various exchanges on which the stock was listed.

In the period 1934-1936, Transamerica Corporation paid Associated American Distributors, Inc., a total of $2,352,783, which the commission claimed was treated as "paid-in surplus." Its alleged failure to reflect this item as a current expense with a consequent reduction in "earned surplus," the SEC charged, rendered the Transamerica Corporation's balance sheet "materially misleading."

The commission also said it had reason to believe that certain sections of the balance sheets of California Lands, Inc., and Capital Co., as of December 31, 1936, were "materially misleading."

"It appears to the commission that the general policy of Transamerica Corporation and its subsidiaries with respect to the manner of creation and treatment of certain reserves, and the adequacy thereof," the SEC said, "is improper in the following respects:

"In the elimination of reserves on the books of certain companies and the creation of fictitious reserves in similar or substantially similar amounts on the books of other companies in the Transamerica group for the purpose of utilizing such reserves to absorb losses with consequent distortion of the true financial condition of the separate corporate entities and of the entire group as a whole."

The SEC said it further appears that in its annual report for 1937, the corporation failed to file financial statements for itself and its subsidiaries certified in accordance with the commission's requirements.

In ordering the hearing, the SEC said it would seek to determine whether Transamerica has "failed to comply" with certain sections of the securities exchange act of 1934 and the SEC's regulations "and if so, whether it is necessary or appropriate for the protection of investors to suspend for a period not exceeding 12 months or to withdraw the registration of said corporation's capital stock, $2 par value, on said New York Stock Exchange, Los Angeles Stock Exchange and San Francisco Stock Exchange."

The commission named Henry Fitts to preside over the hearings.

San Francisco, Nov. 25 (AP).—A. P. Giannini, founder, and John M. Grant, president of Transamerica Corporation, asserted tonight they believed the complaint made by the Securities and Exchange Commission against the corporation was "calculated" to injure the holding company.

Giannini, a dominating figure in West Coast finance, has made numerous public statements supporting the Administration of President Roosevelt.

San Francisco, Nov. 25 (U.P.).—An official of Transamerica Corporation tonight said Securities and Exchange Commission charges against Transamerica concerning alleged "misleading statements" in its registration statement "appear to be only a bookkeeping problem that will be cleared when a study of records and files is made."

New York, Nov. 25 (AP).—William McC. Martin, president of the New York Stock Exchange, asserted tonight he had not been advised officially of the Securities and Exchange Commission's proposed hearing to consider suspension of trading in Transamerica Corporation shares on the New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco stock exchanges, as announced in Washington today.

Kenwood Blanket

is a luxury in all but price!

Kenwoods are beautiful, of course. So are some other blankets. But Kenwoods meet every acid test of the pure wool blanket.

The Squeeze Test: Gather a Kenwood up in your hand. Squeeze it tightly. Because it is made of live wool, it is soft, springy and has a feeling of fullness in your hand.

The Stretch Test: Take hold of a Kenwood in both hands and pull it in opposite directions. Then push your finger against the stretched portion and feel the firm under-weave.

The Nap Test: Grasp a bit of the nap between thumb and forefinger and try to lift the blanket. Being a Kenwood, the well-anchored nap can support the weight of the entire blanket.
And last, but not least, every Kenwood has real tuck-in. There's a Kenwood for every possible need. In a choice of 8 different colors.

It's a Welcome Gift

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Merrily the endless warfare between the leftists and rightists goes on in Washington . . . On a dozen fronts . . . Recently an anti-Fascist threatened a downtown restaurant with boycott if it continued to serve Italian prunes.

Capt. R. E. Hill . . . gilded Marine

And now a pro-Fascist patron of the same restaurant has served notice that he is outraged by the Russian dressing served with the salads and that unless this subtle Stalinite propaganda is discontinued he will take his appetite to another rathskeller.

So far the restaurant has had no complaints against the New England boiled dinner.

• • • •

Whether by accident or design, at the last big dinner the President attended (where the walls were adorned with some 40 big cartoons of him) the more unflattering ones were massed in front of him, where he could study them as he ate. The pleasanter likenesses were mostly behind him, out of range of his roving eye.

"—the U. S. lets go, too"

In the most delicate, tactful way possible a foreign diplomat was trying to convince a luncheon tableful of Americans that this country, too, has imperialistic schemes up its sleeves, and should not throw stones at other nations on conquest bent.

He was going strong until, over the coffee, an American attempted rebuttal.

"In the last 40 years," he said, "we have been in—but also out of—Cuba, Haiti, Santo Domingo, Nicaragua and Mexico. Now we are willing to clear out of the Philippines if the Filipinos want us to . . . No other country except Denmark has in this century willingly relinquished any foreign territory on which it once got its clutches." This silenced the foreigner, for the moment.

CAPITAL CAVIAR: G. O. P.'s John Hamilton encountered Dorothy Thompson in an elevator the other day and, though she greeted him by name, he failed to recognize her . . . Around Washington Congressman Martin Dies' headline hunting is interpreted to mean that he'll challenge Tom Connally for his Texas Senatorship in 1940 . . . Sensitive people claim that Democratic officialdom in the bureaus has been infinitely politer to stray callers since the election . . . The snarl of gold braid on a Marine Corps aide's uniform at the White House (like Capt. R. E. Hill's) must weigh almost two pounds. . . . So many extremists on both sides are trying to take the profit sharing inquiry for a ride that a blow-off from Senator Herring, the chairman, is due soon.

It's rather a pity that young Teddy Roosevelt is in political eclipse . . . Otherwise oldsters might enjoy in 1940 watching a Taft son and a Roosevelt son struggling once again for a Republican nomination, as in 1912 . . . As it is, a Taft-Roosevelt fight for the Presidency is about as good a bet as any other pair you might name; but the other Roosevelt branch.

Promptly he received a friendly reply from the busy Ambassador with the address and recommendations, as one connoisseur to another.

When Congress convenes after New Year's it's certain that several members will try to evolve methods for forcing Germany to pay for the rescue of the refugees she is robbing and pushing penniless across her borders . . . Senators and Congressmen now drifting through the Capital are outraged at the organized stealing by the Nazi government and the dumping of the victims into more civilized lands . . . To illustrate how the Congressional tempers are aroused: Some are pondering a heavy registration fee on all German aliens in this country; others think a stiff fee for all passports issued for travel in Germany might help; and another idea is a heavy landing fee for German ships. Some, of course, are more practical, and are studying the mazes of international trade and finance for a spot to grab Germany where the hair is shorter.

Md. Counties Must Pay for Sewer Lines

$1,000,000 Is Cost Connect With D. C. Would Pay a Tax May Build Own Plant

Nearby Maryland communities must bear the entire cost of connecting their sewer lines with the District sewage disposal plant or build their own plant, they have been informed in a letter from the District Commissioners, it was disclosed yesterday.

Cost of the tie-up with the sewage plant at Blue Plains, D. C., was estimated at more than $1,000,000. Cost of the home plant was estimated at $6,000,000. These estimates were made by District engineers as a result of a request by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, which has been attempting to rid the Anacostia River of pollution.

Hazen Approves Idea

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, who originally took the stand that the Maryland authorities should "pay the bill," said he would be "very happy" if the Prince Georges and Montgomery County sewers were linked with those in the District, "but the District will not assume any financial responsibility."

In order to connect the trunk lines in Prince Georges it would be necessary to build a new line from Colmar Manor, Md., to Poplar Point, D. C. From that point to the plant at Blue Plains, the existing line is of sufficient size to care for the increased load.

Commissioner Hazen said the cost of work actually done in the District would be about $600,000.

Would Pay Yearly Tax

In addition to the cost of installation of the sewer lines to the disposal plant, the Maryland communities would be taxed about $11,000 annually as their share for maintenance of the plant, Hazen said.

A proportionate share of any enlargements to the plant contemplated for the future also would be levied against the Maryland communities.

It was believed the Maryland authorities would prefer connecting their system with the District's because of the proposal by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission to make a park along the Anacostia River banks. Should a plant be constructed by the Maryland communities it would be on the banks of the river near Colmar Manor or Bladensburg.

Resettlement Unit Praised By Roosevelt

By the Associated Press.

Pine Mountain, Ga., Nov. 25.—President Roosevelt drove his little open car 25 miles back into the Georgia hills today to praise the fighting spirit of 250 farm and mill families making a successful comeback from the dire poverty of only four years ago.

It was his annual inspection of one of the New Deal's first resettlement experiments — the 13,000-acre Pine Mountain Valley project opened in February, 1935, to provide a self-sustaining co-operative farming venture for the needy of this region.

Today he found the community grown to 1,100 persons.

Each family is provided an average of 36 acres, a house and horse and mule at a low cost to be repaid over 15 years. A community cattle and poultry farm and co-operative dairy are bringing in a profit on production above community needs.

The President was accompanied by his physician, Dr. Ross T. McIntire, and his naval aid, Capt. Daniel J. Callaghan.

At the project, Miss Gay Shepperson, president of the Pine Mountain Valley Corporation and WPA administrator for Georgia, and William T. Bennett, project manager, sat with President Roosevelt in his car as he inspected scores of exhibits in front of the white frame schoolhouse.

The President told settlers grouped about the schoolhouse and shivering in the wintry air that "I hope you realize that what you people are doing is not merely for yourselves, but a lot of others throughout the country are profiting by the example you are setting."

The President sat bareheaded for an hour as the adults and children presented a pageant depicting a queen receiving offerings representing the community output over the three seasons.

Cold Spell Drives Ducks to Sanctuary for Free Meals

Paul Hodge, a caretaker at the Federal wildlife sanctuary at Roaches Run on the Mount Vernon boulevard, bands (left) a pin tail duck which dropped in for some eats and was trapped. The bird was sent on his way after his meal. Hodge also baits a trap (right)

The snowfall and cold snap brought hundreds of new feathered wayfarers to the Federal wildlife sanctuary at Roaches Run an inspection revealed yesterday.

"On their way south, they dropped in for a few free meals and shelter when the storm struck," said Paul Hodge, caretaker, who reported that the duck refuge now has about 2,000 pintails, black ducks and mallards.

Many of the wild birds make their year 'round home at Roaches Run, where they are fed and protected, but the majority are migrants who've just stopped over for a brief breathing spell.

All that the National Park Service, which administers the sanctuary, asks in return is that the ducks be kind enough to be trapped so Hodge can band them. Only a very small percentage accommodates, however. Yesterday a total of seven entered the trap.

Purpose of the banding, which is being done at hundreds of stations throughout the country, is to trace the birds' migrations. As soon as the identification tag is attached to the leg the duck is released.

Then when a banded bird is shot by a hunter or waddles into a sanctuary trap, all you have to do is report the serial number to the Biological Survey to find out where the specimen came from.

Neither the snow nor cold has been severe enough to cause his wards any inconvenience, said Hodge. They report twice daily for feeding and find plenty of shelter in the reeds and marshes.

Citizens Call Tax Committee 'Undemocratic'

Deery Proposed Rise Levy Held 'a Phony' 13 Groups Present

The Commissioners' Advisory Tax Committee, which last week proposed a four-fold revision of the District tax structure, was called "undemocratic and unrepresentative" at a meeting of the Tax Council of District Citizens Committees at Wesley Hall last night.

The indictment was heard by representatives of seven citizens associations, four locals of the United Federal Workers of America, the Washington Lawyers Guild and a nonpartisan lobbyist group.

A report of a research subcommittee read by Arthur Bernstein, of the Federal Workers, Local 10, specifically criticized the proposal of the Commissioners' Advisory Committee which advocated a combined retail sales and income tax.

The report said that "the retail sales tax is sugarcoated with a phony income tax. No rate is given which means any rate might be proposed. No reasonable reason for lumping the sales tax with the income tax can be given unless those who advocate it are afraid they cannot get either through alone."

The report called the Commissioners' Advisory Committee "undemocratic" because the public had not been given an opportunity to work with the committee in framing the report. The committee was further criticized for setting the general hearings, to be held next Monday and Tuesday, too soon after the issuance of the report to give citizens an opportunity to prepare any opposition.

"In view of these facts," the report concluded, "it appears that the Commissioners' Advisory Committee is unrepresentative of the great mass of the people of the District of Columbia. For not only would a truly representative committee not have indorsed a retail sales tax but would have made every effort to project consumers against the unjust burden which such a tax imposes upon them."

U. S., Keeping Cosmetics Safe, Allows 1,000,000 Shades

Ancients Knew All Beauty Tricks Galen Invented Cold Cream Parliament Acted to Protect Men

Although the modern woman paints herself some 2,000 colors—including green, purple and burnt sienna—she has advanced very little when it comes to the basic materials which go into her cosmetics, according to Dr. Dan Dahle, Department of Agriculture chemist.

Dr. Dahle, who heads the laboratory where beautification products will be tested under provisions of the new food and drug law, points out, for instance, that when the Egyptian woman of 4,000 years ago wished a tonic for gray and thinning hair she had this formula at her command:

"Fat of the lion, fat of the hippopotamus, fat of the crocodile, fat of the serpent and fat of the Egyptian goat. Make into one and rub the head of the bald one therewith."

Sounds Funny Yes

"It sounds funny yes; but recently I tested a hair restorer patented by the Germans in 1936. I found thickened swine gall in alcohol deodorized by activated carbon."

The formula for cold cream, Dr. Dahle says, was thought up by the Roman physician Galen 1,800 years ago. "It hasn't been changed much," he declared yesterday.

Since September the cosmetics laboratory has been certifying and putting black marks against coal tar dyes which eventually land on the faces of women. Out of 200 on the market when checking up began, 95 have been found to "have no particular bad marks against them.

In excluding the others from the market, Dr. Dahle and his workers are not trying to limit the rainbow lengths to which women go to bedeck themselves, but are trying to protect the lovely things from dyes that might be "unsafe."

Million Shades Possible

"Goodness, they can still have colors. Manufacturers will have to take more pains with the mixing, but well over 1,000,000 shades still will be possible," he declared.

Beginning June 25, when the new act goes into effect, the laboratory will examine the finished product. If any of the blacklisted dyes are found, the law will take its course. The art of beauty must be freed from its hazards, Congress has decreed.

Hair dye is the greatest "single danger" among the cosmetics today, especially if eyelash treatments are included, Dr. Dahle said.

"Lipstick has the greatest per cent of pure pigment, about 10 per cent. Some hair tonics have as little as one-tenth of a per cent," he asserted.

While the new cosmetics law may be viewed as a protection to women, Dr. Dahle pointed out, in the seventeenth century the English Parliament passed a "beautification law" especially as a protection to men. The law claimed that women through the use of such trickery as false hair, iron stays, false teeth and hip pads often lured men into the pitfalls of matrimony. As a protection to the guileless males, such women were declared subject to the provisions of the witchcraft rulings.

Bridge Tourney To Open Tonight

An open bridge tournament, arranged by the American Legion, will start tonight at 8:15 p. m. in the headquarters of the American War Mothers, 1527 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

The tournament will be held each Saturday evening for four weeks, with mixed pairs playing tonight, men's pairs and women's pairs next week, open pairs December 10 and teams of four December 17. More than 40 prizes will be awarded.

Gen. James A. Drain, former national Legion commander, is chairman of the general committee, with Lieut. Comdr. W. A. Corley, U. S. N., retired, in charge of the tournament committee. Capt. A. M. Grunther, who refereed the match between Sidney Lenz and Ely Culbertson, will be technical adviser.

Mass Meeting Dec. 5 Religious Liberty Topic Rabbi Simon to Preside

One Senator and two prominent churchmen will speak on religious freedom and the persecution of Jews in Central Europe at a mass meeting at 8:15 p. m., December 5 in Constitution Hall.

All citizens interested in preventing intolerance were urged to attend by the sponsor, the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital.

Speakers will be Senator Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska; Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, representing Protestant clergy; and Father Edmund W. Walsh, vice rector of Georgetown University and director of its Foreign Service School, representing Roman Catholic clergy.

The specific purposes of meetings sponsored by the committee this year, in view of recent Jewish persecutions, will be:

To demonstrate the unity of the religious forces in the Nation's Capital.

To re-emphasize the American ideal of religious freedom under the Constitution.

To promote the conviction that religion is essential to true democracy.

Captain Tells Of Seeing Isle Rise 1,000 Ft.

Hobnobbing with cannibals, delving into ancient history, hunting domestic animals gone wild, and eating strange foods were among the varied activities of Capt. Irving Johnson and his wife during a 35,000-mile voyage in a sailing boat, as described to members of the National Geographic Society last evening at Constitution Hall. The trip, which occupied 18 months, was made in a 92-foot craft. Besides Dr. Johnson and his wife and infant son, there were aboard a physician, a cook and a crew of 14—12 young men and two young women, all Americans.

Capt. Johnson watched a volcanic eruption which entirely changed the contours of the harbor in which he was anchored—that of Rabaul, on the Island of New Pontain, in the southwestern Pacific. Before his eyes a low, palm covered islet was changed to a smoldering cone 1,000 feet higher. He and his party were the first to climb the new volcano

'Bandanna' Suspect Jokes With Victims

As 7 Identify Him Praises One's Bravery Reconciled With 'Pal' Sorry For His Bride

As lighthearted as when he started on his honeymoon-robbery spree two weeks ago the alleged "bandanna bandit," a 23-year-old former college student, joked with his suspected accomplice who "squealed" and the seven victims who identified him last night.

The gang leader, who police said is Edward C. Fullam, graduate of a Pennsylvania engineering college, at first berated his Washington henchman, John Bartholomew, 22, of the 800 block of East Capitol street, when the two men faced each other in the police line-up.

"You're a rat," Fullam said; "you wouldn't take the rap, would you?"

Jokes With Detectives

His mood changing to one of friendliness, Fullam shook hands and joked with Bartholomew and detectives. He told Lieut. John Fowler, head of the robbery squad, that "a policeman's gun," which was stolen from a scout car, had "done the jobs."

Continuing his convivial mood, he called one of the hold-up victims, Dr. Louis Bradley, a druggist, whom he robbed of $110, "the bravest man I ever met."

"When I told him to throw up his hands, he just turned away and reached for a cigar on the counter. He didn't shake or act frightened like most of the others did," Fullam said.

Victims Are Genial

Surprising was the genial attitude with which most of the robbery victims accepted Fullam's overtures. Herman Ritzenberg, who operates a grocery store at 123 Fifteenth street southeast, told Fullam there were "no hard feelings". Ritzenberg last week was robbed of $50.

Only at the mention of his bride of two weeks at whose home at Sewell, N. J., Fullam was captured last Thursday, did he become serious. Reminded that it was to finance his honeymoon that he had allegedly committed his robberies, Fullam expressed regret for the first time.

"I am sorry for what I've done on her account. I hope she'll get an annulment."

WPA Firehouse Is Dedicated In Broadcast

A 30-minute national radio broadcast from the Glen Echo (Md.) Firehouse and Community Hall yesterday presented the hall to the country as a "typical PWA project in a typical American town."

The program was one of a series arranged by the Department of the Interior under the general title of "Men at Work—The Story of PWA."

Mayor Henry T. McCuen, members of his council, and C. W. Sands, of the Conduit road fire board, were among the Glen Echo citizens who participated in the program. The Glen Echo project was dedicated in 1935, one of the first PWA projects completed.

Jumbos, Plus Spring in Fall, Are Problem

So Are Blossoms
Struss Is Trussed

By Frederick C. Othman,
U. P. Hollywood Correspondent.

Calabasas, Calif., Nov. 25.—It was springtime in the valley, with heliotrope abloom, apple blossoms a-flutter—and the cameraman holding his breath whenever the breeze sent leaves rustling down from the oak trees. These trees refused to co-operate with Hollywood; they insisted upon acting as if it was autumn.

In production was Hal Roach's "It's Spring Again," featuring Oliver Hardy, Harry Langdon, Stepin Fetchit, Alice Brady, Billie Burke, Jean Parker, James Ellison, June Lang, and Queenie, a love-sick elephant. Queenie was a problem.

The script, as concocted by Producer A. Edward Sutherland and Corey Ford, called for Hardy to playe the part of a country doctor, Langdon, a touring medicine show operator, and Queenie, his performing pachyderm. She gets sick, Dr. Hardy cures her, and she falls in love with him. The story goes on from there.

"And how," demanded Director Gordon Douglas, "am I ever going to get a scene like this?"

An Elephantine Order

He pointed to a line in the script, which said:

"Queenie's face lights with relief—close shot."

Douglas thufbed the scenario, which was replete with directions such as these:

"The elephant is still trotting down the road with gathering speed. There is an increasing light of determination in her eyes."

"Queenie comes up to Dr. Hardy with the light of joy in her eye. She picks him up and swings him affectionately in the air."

"Queenie looks up at him with an affectionate smile, and rises.

The 4-ton Queenie munched peanuts patiently, switched her tail, and shut her eyes, while the experts argued methods of getting her to smile, look affectionate, and appear relieved.

Director Douglas said he had pondered the expression on Queenie's face these many days without ever having seen it change; her trainer said he believed that if she smlied, which he doubted in the first place, nobody would know it because her trunk was in the way.

Producer Sutherland told Director Douglas to do his best; he said if the script called for an emotional elephant, it was up to the director to get her to emote. Author Ford, who did all the damage in the first place, was safe in New York, probably chuckling.

Double Trouble

The scenario called for only one elephant, but there were two on the job. The other was named Sally. Sutherland had no use whatever for Sally, but he had to hire her, anyway.

That was because Frank Whitbeck, promotion man at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios and elephant fancier in his spare time, owns both Queenie and Sally. He brought them from a bankrupt circus, keeps them for pets, and rents them to the picture producers whenever they need elephants.

"Cruel?" demanded Sutherland.

"Absolutely," Whitbeck said. "I love those elephants and they love each other and when they're separated it makes them sad and they won't eat their meals and they grow thin and nervous and that makes me feel bad and I just couldn't do it. It would break their hearts."

Sutherland salved the hearts of the elephants and the owner thereof by renting both of them for $450 a week, plus a crate of oranges a day. Whitbeck said his elephants had to have their oranges, else they couldn't put their hearts in their work.

Seasons Out of Season

As for Sutherland's special private springtime, it was a pain to Cameraman Karl Struss.

He photographed the Messrs. Hardy and Langdon and Mme. Queenie against a background of spring blossoms carefully wired to the bushes by the prop department, but the oaks, which were as real as they were full of yellowed leaves, continued to shed.

"And everytime a leaf flutters down," Struss moaned, "I've got to retake the shot."

He said some day he hoped he'd get to photograph a springtime movie in April. But he's been hoping that for the last 20 years. April's the month the movie makers make ski pictures—and cover up the blossoming foliage with artificial snow.

"ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Rowland Brown, adapted to the screen by John Wexley and Warren Duff, costarring James Cagney and Pat O'Brien, with Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart, the "Dead End" kids, George Bancroft, Edward Pawley, William Tracey, Frankie Burke and Marilyn Knowlden. Directed by Michael Curtiz. Previewed Monday, November 21. At the Earle Theater.

The Warner Brothers have not lost the "feel" of gangster pictures. This was evidenced recently by the many unique qualities embodied in "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse." It is now demonstrated with complete conclusiveness in "Angels With Dirty Faces," chief feature of the current bill at the Earle Theater. This grim and relentless subject comes pretty near to being a model of its kind.

BELL.

The action is initiated by the attempted robbery of a freight car by a couple of East Side kids in New York, who are tougher than a hash-house steak. One of them, Jerry Connelly, can run faster than the other and so eludes capture. Rocky Sullivan falls into the toils of the law and is sent away to the reformatory, where he acquires a comprehensive schooling in criminology. He comes out won to the shady philosophies of the gangsters and skilled in their vicious methods. Soon he is a page 1 character in the newspapers, ranking easily as a public enemy near the top of the police calendar.

Jerry, in the meantime, prompted by worthier motives and shielded from such sinister influences, has become the kindly young priest of the slum parish in which both he and Rocky were born and reared. It is upon this life-long attachment, and the divergent paths pursued by the two youths, that the salutary lesson hidden behind all of the melodrama in "Angels With Dirty Faces" is based.

Wages A Lone War

There is, in truth, a vast amount of exciting melodrama behind which the eloquent lesson of this film may be concealed. Rocky Sullivan sees to that in his "lone wolf" conflict for power with the entrenched mogul of the hoodlums, who keeps one finger on the trigger and the other on the political biggies. He begins by out-smarting the chief henchman of the big shot by maneuvering him into a telephone booth in which he himself was supposed to perish under a fusillade of bullets pumped by his victim's gunmen. Mr. Sullivan goes on from there in his pursuit of one of the bloodiest campaigns ever conducted by a young man with only two hands and two guns.

The climax of the picture's gory developments is reached in a pitched battle between Rocky, barricaded in a warehouse, and seemingly the entire New York police force, armed with machine guns, searchlights, gas bombs and a few other trinkets designed for the discomfiture of the wayward. Rocky puts up a valorous fight, but is dissuaded from his ambition to annihilate all of the human race wearing blue uniforms by the heroic intervention of his old pal, Father Jerry. What happens after that delivers "Angels With Dirty Faces" from all charges of being merely a carnival of carnage by giving the plot a redeeming twist that should serve as an inescapable warning to all youths who look upon killers as a species of glorified martyrs.

"Angels With Dirty Faces" has been expertly written, expertly directed by Michael Curtiz, and is handsomely acted by a cast of fine selection, headed by James Cagney and Pat O'Brien. Cagney has never excelled his present work in the role of Rocky Sullivan in all of the similar plays in which he has appeared since "Public Enemy." He is an iron-jawed, but genial, sort of murderous outlaw, actuated by motives forced upon him by circumstances and the ability to run as fast as Jerry Connelly when the cops were after them. Pat O'Brien is sufficiently impressive as the symbol of rectitude to make the contrast acute and dramatically valuable.

Romance Is Subordinated

Ann Sheridan sustains whatever romantic interest the more violent ramifications of the gangster's personal history permit to pop up. The gentler moments of the melodrama are few and far between. But comedy is not slighted. In his dealings with those robust and rebellious young citizens known as the "Dead End" kids—Billy Halop, Bobby Jordan, Leo Gorcey, Gabriel Dell, Huntz Hall and Bernard Punsley—Cagney meets them on their own ground and outguesses them at every turn, with results that frequently are intensely amusing. George Bancroft, Humphrey Bogart and numerous others add to the vivid realism of a violent and fascinating survey of the wages of sin.

It is a sort of "East Side, West Side" revue that Production Manager Harry Anger has fashioned for the Earle stage this week—suggested, no doubt, by the presence of Willie, West and McGinty on the bill, as well as by the nature of the feature picture. Willie, West and McGinty are the blundering builders who flounder around the stage in a series of the most bizarre comedy episodes known to vaudeville. They have been around a long time now and on this visit seem funnier than ever in their perfectly timed and ridiculously droll misadventures.

But the headliner of the program is Patricia Norman, singing star recently here with Jan Garber's Orchestra. Miss Norman returns to score an unequivocal triumph in a group of songs that includes "Heart Full of Rhythm," "Always," "So Help Me," "Ol' Man Mose," "Love Me" and other popular hits.

The Keene Twins, Vic and LaMarr, two agile young women and a pair of athletic men, execute fast feats of acrobatic dancing and gymnastics and the Four Dudleys, a male quartet of sepia entertainers, demonstrate the "Highlights of Swing" by turning on a few real highlights. In the meantime, the Earle Roxyettes have been flitting in and out in a succession of their splendid precision routines, concluding with a drum finale that somehow leads one to believe that the gals really can drum.

The Paramount News further supplements a major feature that kept yesterday's overflow crowds on the edge of their seats—those of them who had seats. A great many were standing at the afternoon performance reviewed.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 25.—After 20 years on the screen I received my first flowers on the opening day of the picture, "Midnight." It seems to be an old custom of Producer Arthur Hornblow—and, I might add, a charming one. Claudette Colbert, Mary Astor, Elaine Barry and I purred over our posies. I've known Mitch Leisen ever since I've lived here, but never worked for him before—but let me tell you the guests in the background of "Midnight" look as though they belonged to our social set or even better. Extras receive the same attention as the star—makeup, hair, gowns, furs and jewels. Class consciousness, Hollywood's famous hallmark, doesn't exist on a Leisen set, and that goes double in his home.

HEDDA HOPPER

Our visitors on the "Midnight" set were distinguished, too. First, Vicar Jardin, who married the Windsors, formerly of Buckingham Palace fame. From caviar to ham—and how he ate it up!

Ely Culbertson stopped by on his way to address 3,500 women on their favorite sport—I said theirs, not mine. He came here for one lecture but 11,000 bridge fiends wanted to attend. They had to split his speeches into three installments. His is a good racket, too. A one-man show, he has 15,000,000 followers, a staff of 4,000 teachers and takes in a half a million yearly.

He pays out $20,000 a year for politeness, the cost of answering every fan letter. Bored with writing exclusively about diamonds and hearts, Ely has written a mystery play to be produced on Broadway. Jack Barrymore threatened to teach him parchesi, but he wouldn't hang around—except long enough to have his picture taken. Makeup was applied—at his request.

Then along tripped Mrs. George Cameron, chairman of the women's board of Golden Gate International Exposition. She found an old schoolmate of her brother-in-law, Joe Tobin, in Jack Barrymore. Both boys were proud of the fact that they'd been thrown out of that school.

Arthur Hornblow, believing two stars better than one, brought his own—Myrna Loy. Swell for us—bad for him—she wanted to buy all the fur coats on the set.

Claudette was having hair trouble. Antoine cut it very short for this picture. Her "Zaza" is still too hot for release and they've ordered retakes. Now they're busy making wigs to match the missing hair.

Elaine Barry, who's playing a milliner, had to have body brown makeup applied to the white birds on her hat.

I asked Jack Barrymore if he wasn't afraid of being stopped on every street corner in New York by panhandlers. He said, "Not with my present family beside me." Elaine and her mother were the first to laugh.

Among the girls on our set I discovered a clever little artist, Charlotte Dabney Hallaran, whose water colors hang in the homes of Eddie Cantor, Josef Von Sternberg and Gene Towne. She has just finished the murals for the nursery of an oil millionaire.

"Pumpkins" Parker, a cute bit of blonde fluff, came in to have her sheet adjusted by Mitch. "Pumpkins" was working next door on "Cafe Society" set—but E. H. Griffith, her director, directs, doesn't drape. Our Mitch does both. They were doing a new kind of party which will catch on in your town, too. Come-as-you-were-when-you-received-the-invitation. They did—you can imagine the result.

I went next door to get a fleeting look of Lucius Beebe playing himself in "Cafe Society." He was so nervous as himself that he said, "This is Lucius and Beebe," proving it takes a columnist to give yourself star billing before you've made good. And star Madeleine Carroll was doing the Park avenue gimp, which is the Virginia Reel in jitterbug time.

And speaking of jitters—Jack Barrymore had to remind me of the time he first met the Duke of Westminster. He was about to be tossed out of the casino at the Biarritz when the Duke approached and, thinking he was in the same party, said, "You look as bored as I feel—let's get out of here."

Then to the bar, amid the clicking heels instead of a kick of the toe on the august posterior of a member of America's royal family. And that meeting enabled Jack to cash checks all summer.

My lunch was delivered by A. C. Lyles, jr., a mail boy who writes a daily column for his home paper in Jacksonville, Fla. Adolph Zukor had brought him, the day before, an autographed photograph. Pretty swell for the greatest of all star makers to remember a mail boy on the day he said good-by!

'Kentucky' Puzzles Racetrack Officers

Officials of the Hollywood Park race track at Inglewood, Calif., were overjoyed and then chagrined when 20th Century-Fox put in improvements around the paddock and stables when the place was used as a location for Loretta Young and Richard Greene in the Technicolor production, "Kentucky."

In order to make the place resemble a Kentucky race track, the studio nursery department transplanted trees, shrubs and flower bushes indigenous to Kentucky all over the place.

The added touch of beauty was welcomed by the race track officials when they saw it, and invited a number of friends to come down to see the transformation as soon as the company would be through shooting.

But all of the trees and flowers had been removed and taken back to the studio for future use, and the landscaping had been redone to bring it back to its former state, inasmuch as the studio had agreed to leave things as they had found it.

"THERE GOES MY HEART." Hal Roach picturization for United Artists of a story by Ed Sullivan, adapted to the screen by Eddie Moran and Jack Jevne, costarring Fredric March and Virginia Bruce, with Patsy Kelly, Alan Mowbray, Eugene Pallette, Arthur Lake, Claude Gillingwater, Etienne Girardot, Nancy Carroll, Marjorie Main and Harry Langdon. Directed by Norman Z. McLeod. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

One suspects that Hal Roach had it in mind to make another carefree and "goofy" comedy like "Merrily We Live," when he produced "There Goes My Heart," this week's major screen feature at Loew's Capitol Theater. While he fell considerably short of that high goal, he did contrive an amusing whimsy with which to pad United Artists' release schedule.

"There Goes My Heart" is a pseudo-newspaper story, concerning the romantic adventures of a fabulously rich young woman, granddaughter of a chain store magnate, and a reporter who is assigned to the story of her rumpus with her grandpappy—"Gramps" to you—and subsequent disappearance from her accustomed platinum haunts. The young man gets the story, gets in bad with both "Gramps" and the heiress, gets the gate from his boss and, in time and a few reels of celluloid, gets himself married. Yes, to the girl with all that money.

The story has been developed with a fine eye for brittle comedy, but not much for the fine capabilities of Fredric March and Virginia Bruce, cast in the roles of the two pleasant antagonists. Among the feminine members of the cast, Patsy Kelly, deflated into a striking semblance of her former svelte self, comes nearest stealing the picture. Miss Kelly is very funny in their ice rink sequences, so are Mr. March and Miss Bruce, although I should say that farcical comedy is not the forte of either of them.

Mr. Mowbray Has a Name

Playing opposite Miss Kelly, in the role of a subway motorman studying to be a chiropractor by mail, Alan Mowbray is almost completely wasted. His character name is Mr. Pennypepper E. Pennypepper, the "E.", as Miss Kelly points out, being merely to break the monotony. Claude Gillingwater is playing his crochety millionaire guardian for the steenth time and does it with habitual skill. Nancy Carroll is cast as one of the cattier of the shopgirls in the Butterfield store, in which Joan, of that name, goes to work as a safe means of hiding from her family. Moroni Olsen, Arthur Lake, as a young and very dumb newspaper photographer; Eugene Pallette, as the impossible editor, and Etienne Girardot, a Caspar Milquetoast secretary, are among others who participate in the innocuous little fable concocted by Ed Sullivan and adapted to the screen by Eddie Moran and Jack Jevne.

The stage bill at the Capitol this week introduces a new West Coast personality of great good nature and exorbitant poundage, in the person of Romo Vincent. Mr. Vincent has been seen in numerous pictures, but none of them has revealed the full measure of the man's versatility as an amiable and ingratiating master of ceremonies and a gifted personal entertainer. Mr. Vincent's impersonation of Charles Laughton in the role of Capt. Blight in "Mutiny on the Bounty," is the best of them all. His songs, also, fall into the category of the stage's better things, and his address is fluent and agreeable. In physical dimensions he is Johnny Perkins' twin.

During the course of the proceedings, Mr. Vincent has occasion to introduce Charles Master, a faint carbon copy of Jack Powell, as a drumstick syncopationist; the Varsity Coeds, a sextet of charming feminine vocalists, who sing their songs gracefully and well, and Joe Besser, assisted by Lee Royce, in an interval of low comedy that is lent distinction toward the end by Mr. Royce's fine barytone interpretation of "Ol' Man River." Had he had the requisite numbers, he could be singing encores yet.

Varied Auxiliaries

Punctuating these individual contributions to the bill, the 16 Rhythm Rockets prance in and out in efficiently executed dance routines that have been given the added advantage of spectacular lighting and stage effects.

Phil Lampkin's orchestra celebrates "Football Week" in a rousing musical way, but slows down at the end to permit the introduction of a too lengthy tribute to the spirit of Knute Rockne and Notre Dame by a local sports writer in a nicely staged domestic scene.

The Fox Movietone News, as usual, embraces a wide variety of current subjects and one of Lew Lehr's inimitable comedy touches, devoted, this time, to a gentleman who thought he had invented a rocket bicycle, but discovered to his chagrin, that all he really had invented was a new way to break his neck. His determination to try again is greeted by a lusty "You're nuts!" from Mr. Lehr. Mr. Lehr, however, was entirely right.

Reverting to "There Goes My Heart," the picture is well worth the price of admission for Patsy Kelly's battle with the electric vibrator, if nothing else. But there is a great deal else that yesterday's audience hugely enjoyed.

Narrow Escape For Plane Pilot

Working with a half-dozen other speed fliers and members of the "Tail Spin" cast at the Alhambra airport, Crosby's tiny racing ship caught fire as it taxied across the field just before a take-off.

Crosby, strapped into the cockpit and with the cowling closed over his head, managed to fight his way out just as attendants raced up with fire extinguishers. The fire, apparently caused by flames from the powerful motor's exhaust, was extinguished with some difficulty and Crosby escaped with minor burns.

World Flooded With the News Of Hollywood

Millions of Words Daily
40,000 'Stills' a Week
Circle the Globe

The lives, loves and lapses of Hollywood are the biggest news story in the world.

A quarter of a million words pour out of the screen capital daily, and that's a record for "covering" the doings of a single group of people.

When he began filming "Men With Wings," featuring Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland and Louise Campbell, Director William Wellman subscribed to a clipping service for printed news of that picture alone. A week later he received six large mail sacks full of clippings—and a bill that staggered him. He cancelled his subscription right there.

In "still" pictures, too, Hollywood is the world's most prolific city. An average of 40,000 pictures a week is issued by the major studios, both for publication and in form of autographed photos requested by the fans.

During the production of Frank Lloyd's "If I Were King," 10,000 pictures of Ronald Colman were printed, and the total on the picture exceeds 35,000. That, of course, is for one of the "super specials." To give you a better idea of the average, there were 18,000 still pictures issued of the Bob Hope-Shirley Ross comedy, "Thanks for the Memory."

This means, roughly, what pictures the stars are making, what pictures they're going to make, what happens to them on the set—and how pictures are made. The public's appetite for technical information about film production is tremendous.

Pictures are what mainly has made Hollywood the pace-setter in women's fashions, men's clothes, architecture, house furnishings and even gardens. A national home-and-garden magazine keeps a correspondent busy "covering" the gardens of film stars, and all the big fashion publications have resident reporters here.

That fans everywhere closely follow the personal lives of stars through Hollywood columns is evident from the truckloads of "fan mail" that reach the studios daily.

Taylor Rides in Lincoln Train

The Galloway locomotive and Imlay coaches comprising the train in which Robert Taylor rides in "Stand Up and Fight" are the same ones which bore Abraham Lincoln from Springfield, Ill., to Washington, D. C., for his inauguration as United States President in 1860. They are museum pieces of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, but the engine, built in 1837, still runs under its own power.

Fung As Wong

Willie Fung will play Wong in "Honolulu." That sounds like the title of a song sequel to "Yuba Plays the Tuba Down in Cuba," but it's actually a bit of casting news from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

January Booked At the National

Enjoying one of its most successful seasons in recent years, the famous old E street playhouse has in immediate prospect "Golden Boy" and "Pins and Needles," for the pre-holiday trade. Four weeks, beginning the first of the year, now have been definitely filled in as follows:

The week of January 2 will mark a return engagement of Clare Boothe's all-feminine comedy of "The Women," produced by Max Gordon.

On January 9, Beatrice Lillie will be starred on the National's stage in Noel Coward's new musical, "Set to Music."

Helen Hayes will return to the stage of its premiere performance in "Victoria Regina" the week of January 16.

For the week of January 23, the Theater Guild will present the Mercury Theater's production of Orson Welles' "Five Kings," a Shakespearean symposium.

So now you know.

Open-Air Theater Closes Tonight

Having introduced a new type of motion picture exhibition to film lovers of Washington and vicinity, and enjoyed a prosperous season since its opening late in the summer, the Mount Vernon Theater, open-air amusement place for automobile patronage, will close its gates for the season tonight.

With its 60-foot screen, super-amplifiers for sound projection and multiple-terraced parking "auditorium" for cars—which served as the audiences' own "orchestra chairs," the Mount Vernon, during its first season, brought to the environs of the National Capital a unique type of picture presentation that already had been proved successful in other more northern communities.

According to announcement made yesterday by Manager Gould, E. M. Lowe, owner of the auto theaters, is extending his chain to New Orleans this winter and next year plans a "house" for Baltimore similar to the one on the Richmond highway below Alexandria.

It is the present expectation to reopen the Mount Vernon for its second season of operation on March 1, 1939.

William Powell, who moved into a Beverly Hills hotel when his lease expired on his Chalon Road home, has set up his mother and father in a house a block away so they may be close to him.

CADETS ARE FAVORED TO BEAT NAVY TODAY

For 60 Minutes Today—A Nation Divided as Navy Meets Army

EMMETT WOOD (Navy's ace) — The traditional pre-game scene at Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium on Army-Navy Day with the regiment of midshipmen seen parading on the field against a backdrop of one sector of the 104,000 fans in the stadium — ART FRONTCZAK (Army threat)

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

"Just when I was beginning to believe that professional football is on the level," writes Mr. C. H. Nixon, of 1909 Nineteenth street northwest, "along comes that 7-7 affair between the New York Giants and the Brooklyn Dodgers. Pardon me for thinking that it smells of the fish wharves."

POVICH.

The indignant Mr. Nixon adds: "From all accounts of the game, the Giants and the Dodgers must have done some business to protect the Giants' interests. The Dodgers were out of the pennant race and had nothing to lose. But it was important to the Giants that they win the game, or get at least a tie. But the way the Giants got that tie was entirely too raw.

"Tell me please, why, with a 7-0 lead and only a minute and a half to play, the Dodgers attempted to punt from their own goal line. Why didn't they make an intentional safety, give the Giants two points and then take a free kick from their 30-yard line?

"Any high school team would have been smart enough to do that. Yet what did the Dodgers do? They punted, the kick was blocked, the Giants got the ball on the 11-yard line and then scored the tying touchdown. I am holding my nose between my forefinger and my thumb. Why didn't the Dodgers make an intentional safety? Kindly answer that one, if you please."

All right, Miss Hemmingway, please take a letter.

My Dear Mr. Nixon:

I anticipated your letter or others of its tone. At first blush, the circumstances of that Giants' touchdown does look bad. But does it mean, necessarily, that all was not strictly kosher. I do not think so.

Made Dumb Play

There is no disputing the allegation that the Dodgers made a dumb play when they decided to kick instead of taking a deliberate safety. I agree that most any high school quarterback would have called a smarter play, but dumb football should not be confused with the business. It can happen among the pros, too.

I believe, Mr. Nixon, if you will pause to analyze what actually did happen, there is ample proof that the Giants' touchdown was not a gift, but one of the breaks of the game. We will admit that it was a very unsmart play by the Dodgers — punting when they should have taken a safety. Now we will proceed from the point when they chose instead, to kick.

They punted, and the punt was partially blocked, the Giants recovering on the eleven-yard line, as you state. Well, the only way the Dodgers could deliberately put the Giants in position to score a touchdown would be to make a punt that would be partially blocked. If it had been fully blocked, the chances are it would have bounded across the end zone and evolved as an automatic safety, giving the Giants only two points.

I do not think, Mr. Nixon, that any football team is clever enough to deliberately execute a kicking play on which the kick is partially blocked. Thus I absolve the Dodgers and the Giants of any collusion. If any business was attempted, it was being attempted the hard way.

Wouldn't Have Waited

And if the two teams were doing business, I doubt that they would have waited until the final minute and a half before getting in their work. That was drawing it too close, too fine. Anything that might have been attempted at that time would certainly have been too obvious. I choose to think that it was on the level.

You may be asking, Mr. Nixon, how come the Giants were able to score from the 11-yard line in the last minute of play after having been unable to score in the first 59 minutes. That may appear a bit suspicious, but not necessarily. There can be no profound surprise when Mr. Ed Danowski, the leading forward passer in the entire league, throws a touchdown pass, which is what happened.

After that touchdown, there was of course, the seventh point to be kicked, and even had the two teams been doing business there was no guarantee that it could be kicked. A poor pass from center, bad-handling of the ball by the man holding it, or a fraction of an inch miscalculation by the kicker, could have spoiled the attempt even if the linemen made no effort to block it, which the pictures show they did.

It may seem a bit peculiar, however, that the Giants could trail the Dodgers for 59 minutes in a ball game they were supposed to win easily. The week before, the Giants had beaten the league-leading Green Bay Packers, scoring two touchdowns and a safety, while the Dodgers had taken a horrible licking from the Bears. It may not have seemed natural that the Dodgers, a week later could hold the Giants to 7-7. But, as I have said before, this is a tough league. It could happen.

Nats Asking Waivers On Bonura, Is Report

A report current in Chicago that the Washington baseball club had asked waivers on First Baseman Zeke Bonura was neither confirmed nor denied by President Clark Griffith, of the Nats, last night.

"It is my policy never to discuss waiver cases," said Griffith. Waivers are asked on hundred of ball players each year, particularly at this time, with no thought of trading or selling them. Waivers are asked usually only to learn which clubs might be in a trading mood with the winter meeting nearing.

"If waivers have been asked on Bonura, I would not say that it is significant," the Nats' owner added.

Armstrong Is Winner In Bout With Garcia

Defends His Welterweight Title
Filipino Opponent Proves Tough Boy
15,725 Fans Watch Battle in Garden

By the Associated Press.

Madison Square Garden, New York, Nov. 25.—Geared only to a forward speed that never let up, Henry Armstrong did a hand carving job on Ceferino Garcia's face for 11 rounds tonight and then fought back against the Filipino flailer's closing rush to retain his world welterweight championship by a 15-round decision.

The little Brown Bomber from Los Angeles, spotting his rival 12½ pounds in this first defense of his 147-pound crown, chopped both of Garcia's eyes with vicious short swings and never gave the challenger a chance to take the pace throughout the entire 15 tough slugging sessions. Then, in the end, Garcia, obviously outpointed, threw everything into a knockout attempt in the final four rounds that hurt the little "Hammer" but never made him slow up his terrific pace.

In the final analysis, it was this everlasting forward drive that decided the issue. Garcia tried time and again to make Homicide Hank give ground. But it didn't work. Henry poured in all the time with his right eye closed and Garcia's feared holo punch doing damage in the late sessions.

Decision Unanimous

The decision in favor of the titleholder was unanimous by Referee Arthur Donovan and the two judges, but even then some of the "gallery gods" in the crowd of 15,725, who contributed to a gate of $79,931, didn't like it. Boos rang down the upper deck after the verdict was announced, but all observers at the ringside decided these were unfair.

By all odds it was the toughest fight of Armstrong's career—a career that has been studded with battles against bigger men. Weighing only 134 to 146½, meeting one of the most feared men in the welterweight division and bothered by a cold that has had him under a physician's care since Monday, Henry the Hammer went to work in the second round and never stopped after that.

The Associated Press scorecard gave him nine rounds, five in a row from the seventh to the eleventh. Garcia was credited with five, taking three of the last four, and the first heat was even.

Starting slowly, the little Negro didn't get his speed up until the start of the second session. Then, boring in close and laying his head on Garcia's shoulder, he threw those short left and right hooks to the head and body for all but a few seconds of the session. At one point,

Armstrong Matched Again With Ambers

St. John's Plays Today

Faces Johns Hopkins Ends Old Feud
Disastrous Season

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Nov. 25.—The failing football fortunes of St. John's College once a power, dwindles to nothingness tomorrow with a final flickering effort against Johns Hopkins University, bringing to an end the Nation's third oldest gridiron feud.

No more will St. John's collegians take the field in intercollegiate football, in which President Stringfellow Barr saw a "semiprofessional system" and "hidden subsidies" alien to the classical traditions of St. John's.

At one time, powerful St. John's gridders took neighboring Navy in stride. But tomorrow, while Navy's ascendant heroes are battling Army before some 100,000 spectators, St. John's will play Johns Hopkins on a grandstandless gridiron before a handful willing to pay 40 cents to see the "Mighty Mites" pay their last homage to ghosts of gridiron greatness.

The game marks the end of the most disastrous season for the Johnnies. In the four games played thus far they failed to score a point and in one game failed to make even one first down. Hereafter, the gridders will confine their ability to intramural sports and the 100 classics which forms the basis of the new course. All intercollegiate sports ends next September.

The game is the fifty-sixth between the two Maryland schools and the Johns Hopkins Jays are heavily favored to revenge a 46-0 defeat they absorbed in 1928, worst in the history of the series and which still rankles.

Grid Season Nears End

Good Card Scheduled
Crusaders Meet B. C.
Fordham Vs. Violets

New York, Nov. 25 (AP)—Intercollegiate football completes most of its unfinished business for 1938 tomorrow with the Army-Navy battle, the Pittsburgh-Duke intersectional clash and the Southwest Conference tilt between Texas Christian and Southern Methodist the standout games.

Although neither of the service elevens has title aspirations of any kind, the Cadets and Middies will draw a capacity crowd of 102,000 through the gates of Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium.

The season has not been a very successful one for either team. Army has dropped only two of its nine games, but the setbacks came at the hands of two of its major rivals—Notre Dame and Columbia. Navy, with a record of four wins, two losses and as many ties, scored its only major triumph at the expense of Columbia, but tied Princeton and Penn.

Another crowd of 50,000 fans will see Duke defend its unbeaten, untied, unscored-upon record against Pitt's powerhouse, whpped only by Carnegie Tech. Despite the presence of the "Seven Iron Dukes" in the Southerners' forward line, the Panthers are favored.

Texas Christian risks its unbeaten record of nine games against S. M. U. at Dallas in a game that will decide the winner of the conference title. The Mustangs have bowed twice outside their league, but have a perfect percentage within the conference. Largely because of the presence of Davey O'Brien in the

C. U.-South Carolina Game Is Postponed

Scheduled for Monday Afternoon at Brookland
Decision Made Because of Unplayable Field
Postponement Seen as Aid to Cardinals

By Jack Munhall.

After a full day's work with snow plows, shovels and other snow-removing devices had failed to restore the Brookland Stadium gridiron to playing shape, A. J. Bergman, Catholic University athletic director, late yesterday afternoon announced the homecoming football game scheduled today between the Cardinals and South Carolina will be played Monday afternoon, starting at 2 o'clock.

An effort was made to transfer the game to Griffith Stadium Monday night, but Rex Enright, South Carolina coach, refused, saying he could not hold his team here until Tuesday.

The decision to postpone the game, the highlight and climax of a successful season for Catholic University, was withheld until the last possible moment while Eddie LaFond directed the efforts of a crew of laborers who tried frantically to remove the caked ice from the C. U. field. They succeeded in clearing almost a half of the surface but at dusk there was still enough debris left to balk their efforts at marking the field with the yard stripes.

The postponement should increase Catholic University's chance of defeating the strong Gamecocks, for the Cardinals' chief offensive weapon is the forward pass which hardly works to best advantage with a slippery ball. Too, the Cardinals are the lighter and faster team and tradition holds that the slower, heavier squad benefits more by a muddy field. Uncertain footing is an unmatchable equalizer of speed.

Monday's game will be the last in a peculiar season for the Cardinals. With preseason dope pointing to one of Catholic University's most successful campaigns, the Cardinals were an immediate disappointment, dropping their second start to Detroit by the lop-sided score of 27-0. Then after they had walloped West Virginia Wesleyan, 21-0, to arouse a fresh wave of enthusiasm among their students and alumni, the Cards played their worst game of the season in losing to St. Louis, 12-0. Five times in that game C. U. was inside the Billikens' 20-yard line and failed to score.

That failure, however, apparently "made" the Cardinals, for they returned the following week to stage a game comeback and upset De Paul, 14-13, and since have won two more decisions to extend their victory string to three.

South Carolina, playing a grueling 11-game schedule, has compiled a creditable record and looms as a real test to C. U.'s hopes for a brilliant wind-up. The Gamecocks have defeated Erskine, Xavier, Davidson, Duquesne, Furman and in one of the East's biggest surprises held undefeated Villanova to a 6-6 tie. South Carolina's two losses have been of the unfortunate kind, both by 1 point. Georgia inflicted the first defeat on the Gamecocks, winning 7-6, to end their two-game winning streak, and then the following week Wake Forest captured a 20-19 verdict.

Hoyas Decline Bid For Sun Bowl Game

That Georgetown University is in possession of bids to several important postseason "bowl" games was indicated yesterday when its graduate manager of athletics, H. Gabriel Murphy announced the Hoyas had declined an invitation to play in the Sun Bowl game at El Paso, Tex., on New Year's Day.

The Sun Bowl assignment thus is expected to be offered to Western Reserve, which, according to the Associated Press, was the Eastern alternate to Georgetown.

Either the University of New Mexico Lobos or New Mexico State College will represent the West, Dr. Bobo Homan, director of the Sun Bowl has announced.

The Lobos and Aggies finished in a deadlock for the championship of the Border Conference, each having won four conference games and losing one.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, Nov. 25.—Bivouacked in quiet, secluded retreats on the outskirts of this thriving village, the Army and Navy football squads confidently await tomorrow and the thirty-ninth renewal of their blue-ribbon classic that will lure more than 100,000 fans through the municipal stadium turnstiles.

Neither team visited the tarpaulin-covered field this afternoon, but limbered up indoors after word was received that the stadium gridiron will be kept covered until game time tomorrow. The Middies were in uniform an hour at the Manufacturers Club, and Army's drill at the Green Hills Inn was little longer.

Both Lieut. Hank Hardwick, Navy coach, and Capt. Bill Wood, Army mentor, put their men through long skull sessions, however, reviewing their own and the enemy strategy. Both squads are ready for their sternest test of the season and hope to finish on the winning end of the score, although neither is willing to predict the outcome.

Philadelphia Is Gay

Philadelphia, meanwhile, was under a pleasant form of martial law as the vanguard of the service folk began pouring in, and it was a gay throng that packed the hotels and night clubs. From "Benny, the Bum's," to the quieter spots every place was jammed to capacity with humanity, and businessmen gleefully anticipated a record week-end of business.

Unfavorable weather conditions handicapped transportation facilities, but the fans arrived in a steady stream. Tomorrow more than 100 special trains from New York and points north, and Washington, will bring thousands more, while automobiles and bus lines will bring the rest. The game was a sell-out months ago, and while the prospect of a cold day may keep some of the more timid souls at home, at least 100,000 actually will see the game.

The corps of Cadets from West Point, 1,800 strong, is scheduled to arrive at 11:35 o'clock tomorrow morning, and the Midshipmen will detrain a half-hour earlier. As Navy is the host team this time, the Middies will parade first, ground conditions permitting, and the Cadets will have the privilege of strutting their stuff before both civilians and their traditional rivals.

Celebrities to Attend

Celebrities expected to see the game are S. David Wilson, Mayor of Philadelphia; Carl Vinson, chairman of the House Committee on Naval Affairs; William R. Umstead, chairman of the House Subcommittee on Naval Appropriations; Claude Swanson, Secretary of the Navy; Charles Edison, Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations; Rear Admiral J. C. Richardson, chief of the Bureau of Navigation; Admiral C. C. Bloch, commander in chief of the United States Fleet; Rear Admiral J. C. More About Pros vs. Collegians—Baugh

By "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh

Forward Passing Champion National Football League.

A debate that may never be settled, but will always be interesting nevertheless, is: "Could the best college football team beat the best professional team?"

SAMMY BAUGH.

Both sides have their talking points, of course. The colleges can point to their two victories in the five All-Star pro games at Chicago, in which they twice held the pros to ties and once were defeated. The professionals discount those games as true tests.

Steve Owen, coach of the New York Giants, is the latest to come out emphatically in favor of the professionals. In a Nation-wide broadcast the other evening, Owen declared there was no doubt in his mind that the pros could lick the collegians. He said he would be willing to wager that his Giants could defeat any college team in the country.

Owen went on to explain that to him it appeared only natural that a professional team would defeat a college team. "It must be remembered that, after all, the pro coaches have the pick of the Nation's players," said Owen. "The college coach has to work with the material that happens to come to him."

That appears to me to be the best summary of the situation. A professional team never loses players by graduation. Colleges can lose entire backfields or lines when the diplomas are handed out. The college coach must look to his juniors and sophomores and pray that they will do.

The pro coach, if he happens to need a blocking back, a pair of tackles or a pass-catching end, can always go out and sign one from among the college graduates. And he can pick up a man who has had plenty of experience at his job. He doesn't have to deal with green men as does the college coach.

There are some tricks of pro football that new men must learn, of course, but they have already had three years of college football and ought to learn quickly. I actually doubt if the difference between good college football and professional football is as great as the difference between a college second team and a college first team.

The triumphs of professional football teams certainly cannot be construed as any slap at the collegians. After all, pro football players are collegians who are merely continuing their football. And the better the college football, the more grateful the pros, because that means, in time, better pro football.

The man who has been a good football player in college can be equally as good a player among the pros. That is being proven with each passing season. Who are the outstanding pro players? Dutch Clark, Tuffy Leemans, Ed Danowski, Ace Parker, Don Hutson, Cecil Isbell, Bill Shepherd, Whizzer White—to name a few. Certainly, they were great football players in college. It is not surprising that they have starred with the pros.

However, I believe that if any single outstanding college team were placed on a field against an outstanding pro team, it would be one time when experience would prove more valuable than youth. I think the pros would win.

Infidox, Paying $4.30, Wins Jackson Purse in Snow at Bowie

Bill Bennings

At the Post

Selections at Bowie.

Dear Al:

Jockey J. Howell and Owner L. L. Chambers have been suspended by the stewards for the "irregular racing" of the horse Grape Thief. This one couldn't beat the seven dwarfs in previous races and then came along the other day and led all the way. I thought something was doing when the odds board showed 12-1, when, in my opinion, the horse should have been 50-1. I was talking to an old-timer about snow and racing and he told me of a race at Charleston, S. C., run in a snowstorm. He said he took the shoes off his horse and filled his hooves with hot tallow. The horse won by 15 lengths and at 12-1. The boys were whispering a good thing before the first race. It was "Snow White." As if it wasn't bad enough to be beaten in the last election, it had to snow for the race named in honor of Mayor Jackson of Baltimore. There's no truth in the rumor that they were betting ice cycles on yesterday's racing. Somebody asked the track conditions and the reply was "weather clear, track vanilla." They tell me that horsemen hired space in frigidaires for the horses last night. When the horses came out for the first race, the man who announces the equipment said, "Artics on Dinamita and snowshoes on Alice Dodge." This one was on the level. Tommy Daley, the "Voice of Bowie," announced before the second race that Bright Lights was running without shoes. He might have added that Bright Lights was running without speed for the gelding finished a badly beaten ninth. The assistant starters staged snowball battles between races. They tell me that a saliva test on Alice Dodge, winner of the first race, showed up positive. It was hot chocolate. One mutuel department clerk took in $4, three hard-boiled eggs and a box of cough drops on the first race.

BILL.

First race—Late Pass turned in a good effort last out without getting any of the best of the racing luck. With clear sailing this might be the right one in this company. Rippling Rey had a race over this track but I'm tossing that out. This one has a fair speed figure. Rib Roast may turn up a good thing. Howellville and Pandoramint, on the also eligible list, would be dangerous if in action.

Second race—Camaraderie is a slow beginner but showed a powerful effort last out. Gets in this with a feather and could take it all. Riccadonna is a rather steady sort and should take the place. Carnage's last was an improvement and he may be a lot better than generally rated.

Third race—I'm going way out on the limb and take a shot at the moon in this field with Star of Padula. Don't let long odds scare you away. This one will like the track and packs the necessary punch. Greedan closed like the wind earlier in the week. Bing Bong for the show end.

Fourth race—C-Note is better than that last and at the weights he may turn the tables on Deep End. The latter won impressively here. Postage Due probably needed that last over the track and will improve.

Fifth race—Loveday may be a surprise package in this field. A rather steady juvenile, this one can turn on the heat in the stretch and I'm going to take my chances. Xalapa Clown is the class, perhaps, but may not like the track. Blazing Heat to take care of the others.

Sixth race—Petit Jean evidently likes the Bowie going. She won here last year and her sprint the other day was a good one to be second. Gets in this light and I'm going to string along. Ladino showed to advantage in winning that last. Offender is good and could surprise if taken off the reserve list.

Seventh race—Invermark appears headed for the brackets in this company. The Queen was scratched yesterday with this in view. Watersplash for the minor award. Giant Killer may come through with a change in riders.

Best bet—Petit Jean.

Jolly Tar Is Second In Feature

Brown Moth Shows Races Run in Snow Favorites Reward Double Is $20.50

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 25.—With the racing strip covered with a mixture of snow and mud, the show went on here today. Some 3,000 faithful turf fans reported and, despite adverse conditions, the sport was interesting with favorites taking the majority of events. Efforts to scrape the snow off the track failed and officials decided to stage the program at any cost. The one and only time racing has been postponed at a major Maryland track was on April 1, 1925, when several inches of snow erased the opening day card at this track. There were many jocky changes and the boys, for the most part, went to the post overweight due to sweaters and gloves.

D. A. Wood's Infidox found conditions to his liking and carried off the day's chief honors by winning the Mayor Howard Jackson Purse, feature which drew six starters over the course of a mile and one-sixteenth. The Infinite horse won by a half length over Walter M. Jeffords' Jolly Tar with Brown Moth, in the colors of D. J. Sullivan, third.

Double Pays $20.50

Infidox was a $4.30 choice and was capably handled by Jockey Ralph Eccard. The winner's time of 1:53 1-5 was in keeping with the heavy condition of the track.

Brown Moth set the early pace but Infidox was always close up. Leaving the backstretch, Eccard drove Infidox to the front and opened a good lead. However, Jolly Tar came from behind and offered contention in the final sixteenth.

Jockeys Johnny Gilbert and Hilton Dabson did not appear at the track this morning, announcing that they had gone to New York to see tonight's fight.

Daily double tickets were cashed by 332 customers. The combination of "6 and 2" paid off at the rate of $20.50 for the usual deuce.

Alice Dodge, owned by the Everglade Stable, showed a liking for the going and ran off with the first race, winning by three lengths over Dinamita. Gay Casino was third in the field of nine juvenile maiden fillies. Apprentice Ronnie Nash rode the winner, coming from off the pace of Dinamita to open a good lead in midstretch. The winner paid $8.90.

Nansemond Beats Ugin

An assignment of 120 pounds and the favorite role did not stop Dian, owned by G. C. Brenton. The ancient gelding jogged along in front and Jockey Stevenson had little to do in bringing him home five lengths ahead of the nearest opposition, Bright Chance. Taunton was third. Dian paid $4.30.

Howard Bruce, Maryland owner and breeder, sent Nansemond to the post in the third race and the Bud Yerner filly came from behind to gain a neck verdict over Ugin, much to the disgust of the favorite players. Clap In was a tiring third in the field of nine. Nansemond paid $9.30.

War Regalia proved the second winning favorite of the day. The daughter of Man o' War, ridden by Jockey Maurice Peters, drove to the wire a length and a half in advance of a photo for second money in which Stable took a decision from Nellie Bly. The last named set most of the pace. War Regalia paid $4.10.

Lions Plan Game Shift

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Nov. 25.—Manila (Bud) Shaver, general manager of the Detroit Lions Professional Football Club, announced today that if the Lions defeat the Philadelphia Eagles here December 4, their playoff game with the Green Bay Packers for the National League's Western Division title will be held at Briggs Stadium here December 11.

Arrangements for the game, Shaver said, were made today in a telephone conversation with Lee J. Johannes, president of the Packers.

The Green Bay team has completed its regular season. Should Detroit win its final game from Philadelphia, the Packers and Lions would be tied at eight victories and three defeats.

Green Bay, Wis., Nov. 25 (AP).—L. H. Joannes, president of the Green Bay Packers, Inc., denied today a report that a playoff game between the Packers and the Detroit Lions, if necessary, would be held at Briggs Stadium, Detroit, December 11.

The report quoted Manila Shaver, of the Lions Professional Football Club, as saying arrangements had been completed.

Joannes said no tentative agreement as to the site of the game had been reached and that, should a playoff be necessary, it might be staged on a neutral field.

No definite arrangement as to the game's site will be made for several days, Joannes added.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

Sons of the Services

Off hand, almost without giving the matter a second thought, I would say that the Army would beat the Navy today, Pitt would beat Duke, Fordham would beat New York University and Texas Christian would beat Southern Methodist.

VIDMER.

But I've reformed. I've seen things during this waning football season and heard about others which have caused me to take a vow never to say things offhand again, at least as far as the outcome of football games are concerned. And in the future I certainly intend to give such matters a second thought.

I understand that the Army rules an 11-to-5 favorite over their service rivals from Annapolis. Maybe this is as it should be. Maybe the Army really is that much better than the Middies. But the odds were even longer against Yale when it ran up against Harvard a week ago. And although Yale lost, those who laid any optimistic bets on the Crimson at least got quite a few chills before they collected.

And then again just on Thursday, Cornell marched onto Franklin Field, at Philadelphia, ready to conquer its traditional foe with a score fitting the Ithacan's high position in the Ivy League. In fact, on the way to the game, I asked one ardent Cornell alumnus why he was going to the game at all.

"Just to be in on the kill," he smiled blandly. But an aroused Pennsylvania team fought back with the same fury displayed by Yale—the fury of the under dog—and held the big Red team, and a great Red team, to a scoreless tie. It was another display of raw courage and grim determination against a supposedly superior foe, and the same thing is possible on any football field this afternoon. It's one of the reasons that football experts go crazy. Never mind what the other 14 reasons are.

Military Maneuvers

Take the Army-Navy game today as an example. On past performance and what I have seen of these two teams, I would pick the Cadets to win handily, for this is a good Army team in spite of two defeats. One was suffered at the hands of Columbia in a ding-dong battle early in the campaign—before the Army really began to clock and before Columbia's slender forces had been shattered by a series of tough games. The other was dropped to a Notre Dame team which is still unbeaten.

This Army team lacks any standout star. There is no Monkey Meyer, Ray Stecker or Jack Buckler, to mention a few of the more recent flying Cadets. But there is a well-balanced machine, designed by Capt. Bill Wood in his first year as coach, that knows where it is going and generally gets there.

From what I've seen of the Army this season, it appears to be the best coached team ever turned out at West Point. And if it lacks something in man power, it goes a long way toward making up for that in precision. Perhaps I am wrong and I have no figures to prove my point, but taking a random guess I would say that the Army makes more plays per minute than any team operating on the Eastern gridiron this fall. There's no halt or hesitation in the attack. The players go into the huddle, get their signals, come out of it, and line up and are off with rhythmic rapidity.

On the other hand the Navy has seemed a little sluggish and uncertain at times. But there is fine material on the banks of the Severn and the sea service is represented by a team that is capable of doing almost anything under pressure.

Last Stand

Which is the main reason why the Army isn't likely to win as easily today as appears on the surface. Today the Navy will be under pressure. It always is when it faces the Army. Nor is this merely true of the men on the field and sidelines. It's true of the entire regiment of midshipmen, just as it is true of every cadet in the long grey corps.

The tension starts long before the game. It starts even before the football season. In fact, it never quite ceases completely, for the Army and Navy start getting ready for the next game as soon as this game is over. They sit in the stands at Annapolis and West Point and watch their teams play other colleges. But their chant is "Beat Army, beat Army," or "Beat the Navy, beat the Navy."

They shout out their battle cries while marching to classes. They hang sheets, bearing slogans, from their windows a week before the game. At Annapolis they daub the statue of Tecumseh with war paint, and as the regiment of midshipmen marches by, each man in blue and gold raises his left hand in salute and hurls pennies at the ancient Indian chief for luck. When the Army team leaves West Point it passes between two rows of cheering cadets that line the long hill leading from the plains to the railroad station.

And each man of the corps bets a man of the regiment a bathrobe on the outcome of the game. These debts are paid as soon as the losing cadet or midshipman gets back to his barracks on Sunday and at a greater price than the actual cost of the garment, for at the next inspection the cadet or midshipman, as the case may be, will be found to be missing one bathrobe and the officer in charge will ask what became of it.

"I lost it, sir," is the reply, and the punishment is seven demerits. The officers, however, never seem surprised at the strange coincidence that every man under his command should lose a bathrobe on precisely the same day.

Pitt Is Favored Over Undefeated Duke at Durham Today

52,000 Fans Are Expected For Battle

Crowd Favors Devils
Weather Is Good
Panthers 'Crippled'
Teams Are Ready

By the Associated Press.

Durham, N. C., Nov. 25 (AP).—Battle-worn but still defiant, Pittsburgh's Golden Panthers brought the high tide of football into the Southland today when they ran through their last workout before tomorrow's engagement with Duke University's undefeated, untied and unscored-on forces.

Pitt's squad of 34 came over from Chapel Hill, where they are quartered, this afternoon and drilled in Duke's stadium. Their presence lent a last note to the high hysteria prevailing in this sunshiny city, nestled in the heart of the tobacco country.

The South is up for this one. A crowd of 52,000, largest in the history of Southern football, is expected, and it will be 99 and 99/100 Duke. Despite the odds of 2½ to 1 that New York and Durham bookmakers are laying against Wallace Wade's fine football machine hope runs high in the Duke undergraduate body, alumni and the great mass of noncollegiate but sports-crazy fans of this section.

Weather Favorable

In the Panther workout today there was ample evidence the Panthers were below par physically. Al Lezouski, the durable left and running guard, probably will not start. He has a pulled muscle in one leg. In his place Dr. John Bain Sutherland, Pitt coach, has named Walter Raskowski, a tackle. Merkovsky will fill in at Tackle for Raskowsi.

Marshall Goldberg, last year's all-America halfback who turned to fullback and replaced Frank Patrick so ably he again is an all-American nominee, is not in the best of shape either.

He wore stockings in practice while the rest of the squad was bare legged, but even these could not hide the bulge of tape around his left knee.

Duke Near Top Form

"He can run all right, but he can't cut," said the trainer, the rest are ready.

Duke is nearer top form. Jap Davis, a blocking back, will not start. He suffered a shoulder separation and the cast was taken off yesterday. George McAfee, a high speed back, is bothered by a bad foot. The line, headed by Dan Hill, the spectacular center, is ready and able.

Neither Sutherland nor Wade had much to say. The squad had less. The teams are tense and eager. The game can be either Duke's gateway to glory as one of the South's greatest teams of the last victorious salvo of one of Pitt's greatest elevens.

Capital Bowlers Beat Connecticut

Washington bowlers on two fronts last night turned back strong teams from Connecticut in two of three matches.

At Rosslyn, Cuff and Santini, of this city, defeated the Connecticut Blue Ribbons in a team match, rolling a three-game total of 1896 to 1814 for the losers. Astor Clarke, with a high game of 147, turned in 399 for high set. "Pop" Rooney rolled 398 for the Blue Ribbons.

At Bethesda, Henry Hiser's team split even with invaders from Middletown, Conn., losing a singles match and winning in doubles. Steve Witkowski and Jack White, representing Middletown lost the doubles match, 688 to an even 700 for Frank Riley and Lawrence Pugh. But White came back to defeat Chet Lindstrom in the singles, 412 to 386. White had a high game of 158 while Lindstrom's best was a 155.

Revolta Ties Hogan at 67

Lead Columbia Field
Williamson Has 68
Hines, Picard Are 3d

By the Associated Press.

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 25.—Johnny Revolta, of Evanston, Ill., a member of America's Ryder Cup team, and Ben Hogan, sensational 26-year-old newcomer to the pro ranks, paced the field today in the opening round of the $5,000 Columbia-Ridgewood Open golf tournament, each carding a sizzling 67 over the par-71 layout.

Hogan turned in his score of 67 as the sixth entrant to finish, and it stood up until Revolta, playing a beautiful game on the greens, came in near the last. As it was, Revolta nearly had a 66. His first putt on the par-3 eighteenth missed by only 6 inches after another long one on the seventeenth stopped on the lip of the cup.

Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., and Jimmy Hines, of Great Neck, Long Island, playing in a three-some with the Connecticut squire, Gene Sarazen, each turned in a 69, but between them and the leaders was Ralph Williamson, of Fort Wayne, Ind., who shot a 68 after getting four birdies on the back side.

After tomorrow's 18 holes the field will be reduced to the low 60 and ties for the money finale Sunday.

Southeast Varsity Wins in Girls' Hockey

S. C. Favored For Bowl

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Nov. 25.—An unofficial poll of sports editors who chronicle the football deeds and doings of the far-flung Pacific Coast Conference showed today that Southern California was favored to represent the Far West in the Rose Bowl.

Naturally the poll has no official bearing on the Southern California-California controversy over the bowl bid—an issue brought about by the tie between the two institutions for the conference championship.

Early returns of the vote looked like a landslide for Southern California. Even the San Francisco and Oakland precincts, admiring neighbors of the Berkeley Bears, sent in votes for U. S. C.

Los Angeles delegation, of course, was solidly back of the Trojan warhorse.

Spokane, Wash., sent in two for S. C., Portland, Oreg., added another, while Tacoma messaged: "Don't know; let 'em play each other, winner take all."

To which an S. C. spokesman replied: "Hasn't he heard? We've already licked California, 13 to 7."

Seattle, home of the Washington Huskies, chimed in with Trojan ballots, as did the scribes from Moscow, Idaho stronghold, and those from Missoula and Helena, Mont., partisans of Montana's Grizzlies.

The count at this stage was unanimous, but later a lone San Francisco scribe cast a vote for California, declaring the Bear had "the stronger record."

Willis O. Hunter, the Trojans' athletic director, issued the first statement by the school on the Rose Bowl matter. He said he felt S. C. should get the selection and asked that other members consider, first, the S. C. victory over California.

His office supplied the following unofficial table:

Points scored	131	34	107	37
Yards running	1194	307	1061	903
Yards passed	1306	323	519	664
Total gains	1806	619	1600	1567

Pin Stars Vie Today

Lured by more than $1,000 in cash prizes, Washington today will be the Mecca for more than 50 of the East's leading duc:pinners, who will vie for the championship of the Calvert Dixie Sweepstakes, one of the South's annual standout bowling attractions.

With Connecticut, Baltimore, Washington, Norfolk and Richmond heavily represented, and numerous other pin centers sending their best roller or two, the ninth annual affair promises to break all records for entries, according to George L. Isemann, director of the event and executive secretary of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress.

Ollie Pacin, Washington's Northeast Temple expert, is the defending champion.

Rolling will start at Columbia alleys, Fourteenth and Munroe streets northwest, around noon. The second block of five games will be rolled at the Lucky Strike, starting at 3 o'clock. The 15-game test will be concluded at Convention Hall, starting at 8 o'clock.

Redskins Hold Drill Despite Snowfall

Flaherty Hustles Squad at Griffith Stadium
Emphasis Is on Defense for Whizzer White
Indications Are for Fast Field Sunday

Undeterred by the snow that covered the Griffith Stadium gridiron the Redskins romped through a two-hour workout yesterday at a quickened pace as their battle with the Pittsburgh Pirates on Sunday neared.

Any notions that they would be excused from work following a record November snowfall were dissipated for the Redskins when Head Coach Ray Flaherty routed them out of their trundle beds at an early morning hour and marched them to the stadium.

There, in the wake of a ground crew clearing the field with snow shovels, Flaherty drove his athletes through a rigorous practice. The emphasis was on a defense for the Pirates' running and passing plays, particularly when Whizzer White was operating from the tail-back position.

The Whizzer and Tuffy Thompson, former Minnesota star, will be marked men when the opening whistle blows. White, with his passing, his drive and deception, is the No. 1 threat of the Pittsburgh Club, but Thompson, with his speed, constitutes a menace also.

Indications that the game would be played on a comparatively fast field despite the snow prevailed last night. The ground crew removed virtually all of the snowfall and a tarapaulin covered the field last night. It will be removed today in the hope that the sun will improve the footing.

Head Coach Ray Flaherty last night was not ready to announce his starting line-up, but he continued to talk of the fire and dash shown by his shock-troop backfield and there was a strong indication that Sammy Baugh, Andy Farkas and Bill Hartman, regular performers, would be on the bench at the start.

Navy

Army is the popular choice tonight, although Navy has a raft of supporters willing to back up their opinions with coin of the realm. Most wagering tonight was on a 11-5 basis, Army men laying the odds, of course. A few brave souls wanted points as well, but on a game of this kind one is lucky to get even odds.

The Cadets come up to the game with a fairly impressive record, but not one to set the world afire. They whipped a weak Wichita eleven, 32-0, and swamped Virginia Poly, 39-0, before dropping a hair-raising 20-18 decision to Columbia. The team came from behind to nose out Harvard, 20-17, swamped Boston U., 40-0, and lost to Notre Dame, 19-7. Franklin and Marshall, supposed to be a breather, exhibited a stubborn defense and better-than-average offense before bowing, 20-12. Chattanooga went down, as expected, 34-13, and Princeton was defeated, 19-7.

Against these opponents the Cadets showed they had a scoring punch, but needed bolstering in the pass defense department. Army also showed a glaring defensive weakness in the center of the line, one that had been corrected to some extent, although not wholly eradicated in the Princeton game. If the line shows a weakness tomorrow "Punkin" Wood, Navy's ace ball toter, is certain to break through for substantial gains, and possibly for a couple of touchdowns.

Navy experienced a disappointing season after starting well against Virginia's big three, William and Mary, Virginia Military Institute, and Virginia. It won its first two games by the identical scores of 26-0, and polished off Virginia, 33-0 before bowing to a savage Yale Bulldog, 9-7. The Princeton and Penn games, both bruising battles, resulted in stalemates, 13-13,, and 0-0, and when Notre Dame routed the Middies, 15-0, using only a small part of its extensive repertoire, it seemed that Navy's star was on the wane.

But Hardwick's crew pulled itself out of the doldrums at Columbia's expense, coming through with a brilliant 14-9 victory that apparently meant it had found itself at long last.

Between the 20-yard stripes—and even 10-yard lines, Navy has been a potent eleven this season, but once within hailing distance of the goal-line its big batteries have missed fire. This was not the case against Columbia when the team marched the field's length for its first touchdown, and pushed over the second marker without interruption once it laid hands on the ball in the final period.

Wood's running, Whitehead's excellent punting, Cooke's passing and receiving of Powell and other men at the flanks have featured Navy's play this year. All will give their best tomorrow in an effort to conclude the season with a cherished victory over the Graylegs.

Once upon a time there was a man who went to a Sunday night cocktail party. He failed to hear the alarm clock the next morning and awakened at 8:30. (His office opened at 9.) He hurriedly washed and dressed. But when fastening his collar button he discovered that the collar was tight. So he stretched it between his hands and buttoned it up again.

Still it was tight, so he ran his finger on the inside of the buttoned collar (even as you and I) and started pulling . . . and pulled the top button right smack off. He was late to work, cross as a bear that day—and all because of a tight collar.

Moral: Now he wears The Hecht Co.'s MANHATTAN SHIRTS, which are GUARANTEED NOT TO SHRINK BELOW THE INDICATED SIZE. If it does, he will get a new Manhattan Shirt without charge.

Railroad Challenges I. C. C. on Labor Order

Trustees of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad Co. yesterday challenged the authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission to require certain considerations for labor in proposed railway mergers.

The trustees asked the full commission to reconsider a decision by the commission's division 4 which would have permitted the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific to lease the Chicago, Rock Island & Gulf, provided provision was made for certain employes whose jobs would be affected. The division issued its decision but withheld formal promulgation of an order until after compliance with its conditions.

Cotton Close Is Irregular

New York, Nov. 25 (AP).—Early advances in cotton today based on December covering were not maintained when liquidation and hedge selling developed. March sold off from 8:51 to close at a low of 8.44. Final prices were 2 points net higher to 3 lower.

The market opened 4 to 9 points higher when notices representing only 4,900 bales were issued on first December notice day. Firmness of the near month on active covering lent steadiness to the entire list for a time. There was also some foreign buying of later positions.

Wall street selling and liquidation developed in the afternoon and this, combined with hedge selling orders in late months, caused late declines of 5 to 9 points from the highs.

Wheat Nears Bottom Price For Season

Day's Drop 1¼ Cents Export Sales Lag Corn Prices Higher

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—Wheat fell 1¼ cents a bushel here today to within ⅛ cent of the season's bottom record, and ended at virtually the day's lowest level.

Expected big deliveries next week on Chicago December contracts, together with dearth of overseas demand for United States wheat, as well as cables telling of cheaper offerings of Argentina's new crop, were chiefly blamed.

Downturns of values in Chicago contrasted with advances in Winnipeg, where export purchases of Canadian wheat were estimated as totaling upward of 600,000 bushels. Bulges of about a cent in corn prices failed to hold well in the face of wheat market tumbles.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅝ to 1 cent down compared with Wednesday's finish; December, 61½; May 64⅞@64¾. Corn, unchanged to ⅝ up; December at 47⅝; May, 51½. Oats, unchanged to ⅛ advance. Rye, unchanged to ¼-cent lift, and provisions unchanged to a gain of 2 cents.

Stocks Hold Fairly Steady in Lower Volume Storm and Holiday Restrict Trading Hupp Motor Higher on RFC Loan

New York, Nov. 25.—Interest in trading was at a low ebb today partly because of the snow storm which blanketed the Northeast and kept attendance in business quarters low and partly because of the holiday. The result was a turnover of only 806,680 shares on the big board and fluctuations which were fractional in the vast majority of cases.

The composite average showed a minor gain of 0.10 point and only two stocks in the list of 15 most active got as much as a point away from their closing levels of Wednesday. Motors did well and there was some interest in the store shares as Christmas approaches. Oils and the manufacturing division also were firm and rails were little changed. Steels eased slightly and the aviation division was mixed, but with trading again active. Tractions continued to reflect the prospect of unification and in general were higher, with bonds of the affected companies showing good advances.

Hupp Motor came forward as the day's most active stock and reached its former high for the year on a fractional gain which followed announcement of an RFC loan. Small gains were made by General Motors and Chrysler while Packard and Graham-Paige were active but unchanged.

Aviations continued to monopolize a large share of the tape with Douglas the most volatile of the active issues, adding a point. Smaller advances were scored by aviation corporated, Curtiss-Wright, United Aircraft, North American and Boeing.

Utilities were little changed and investors in this group felt much like the fans of a weakened football team who have seen their quarterback execute a brilliant play against an overpowering opposition. The day brought little relief to the followers of utilities in their effort to save their investments but they regarded the testimony of Wendell L. Willkie before the Congressional committee investigating T. V. A. affairs as a moral victory.

Willkie's Logic

For the logic of Mr. Willkie's testimony leaves the advocates of any extension of the government's excursion into the public utility business in an untenable position. For if they wish to see the government go deeper into this field of private enterprise, and at the same time retain some semblance of fairness, they have the offer of Mr. Willkie to sell the properties of Tennessee Electric Power Company to the TVA at a price determined by the Securities and Exchange Commission, a body which was appointed by the President and has built up a reputation for fairness.

If on the other hand they choose to ignore such an offer, they lay themselves open to the charge of desiring not so much to develop power for the benefit of the public as to ruin existing power companies, despite the cost to the public and to the investors who helped create the present facilities.

Indeed the offer is so eminently fair, in that final determination of the price would be placed by Mr. Willkie in the hands of a government bureau, that its refusal would lend weight to the rumor that there are those in the authority in Washington whose chief desire in the public utility field is to "liquidate" Mr. Willkie personally. Testimony thus far has been of such a one-sided nature that today two members of the investigating group accused Francis Biddle, counsel for the TVA commitee, of seeking information which would later aid the TVA in its negotiations with Mr. Willkie for the Tennessee properties.

Even if such a charge must be classed as smoke, without fire, the tone of the testimony thus far indicates that the inquisitors are taking anything but a judicial attitude. Unfortunately, however, it shows that the powers in control still intend to go ahead with their federally subsidized competition for the public utility industry, in spite of the warning of the last election and in spite of the well established fact that their attitude is holding back an expansion of private companies, which needs no more than Federal retirement from the field to start a long delayed boom.

News Favorable

Week-end trade news held to the favorable side. The report on carloadings will be issued today, having been delayed a day by the holiday. The Federal Reserve Board reported a wide advance in business and industry for the first three weeks of November, saying that employment and national income continued to move forward from the depths of the depression. Its seasonally adjusted index of industrial production was at 96 per cent of the 1923-'25 average against 90 per cent in September.

Among the commodities wheat was affected by the rising tide of disappointment over benefits that were expected from the signing of the new Anglo-American trade agreements, efforts to arrange January shipments to Liverpool at 2½ cents under Chicago December prices have been marked by failure. Prices today went to within ⅛ cent of the season's record low. The close was down ⅝ to 1 cent. Cotton was irregular closing 2 points higher to 3 lower.

Traction Bonds Firm

Listed bond dealings remained undistinguished today, with gains somewhat more prominent than losses. Many traders and investors preferred to remain on the sidelines, until after the week-end, and only $5,930,000 bonds were turned over in the dull market. The railroad group remained irregular, but more buying appeared in local traction issues. Foreign dollar bonds were uncertain, along with other speculative securities. Best rated bonds merely churned slowly about, without getting anywhere.

Interborough bonds improved fractionally, but larger gains appeared in Manhattan Railway and B. M. T. issues. Among intermediate priced railroad bond gains and losses were equally numerous, but default rails had a definite downward tendency. Rail and utility holding company bonds improved, while industrial convertibles also were in mild demand. Communications bonds and commodity issues were neglected.

In the foreign section Columbian bonds moved up a point or so on the announcement that default settlement negotiations have been resumed. Other Latin-American bonds were quiet and soft. The European variety of disregarded pledges failed to attract any interest. Japanese bonds drifted lower, but Italians were maintained. Australians were soft, among the high grade foreigns, owing to the gyrations of sterling exchange.

Exports Gain 13%, Imports 6% in October

Favorable Balance Up Tobacco Sales Heavy Auto Exports Rise

By the Associated Press.

United States merchandise exports during October increased 13 per cent while imports increased 6 per cent, as compared with September. The Commerce Department said yesterday that exports totaled $277,928,000 in October, compared with $246,305,000 in September and $332,710,000 in October, 1937. October imports totaled $177,979,000 compared with $167,653,000 in September and $224,299,000 in October, 1937.

The $99,949,000 excess of exports over imports boosted the total excess of exports for the first ten months of 1938 to $960,131,000. In the same months last year, exports were ahead of imports by only $59,322,000.

Exports aggregated $2,573,045,000 in the first ten months, or $138,022,000 less than last year, while the import total of $1,612,914,000 was $1,038,831,000 smaller than last year. The gain in exports in October resulted from increased shipments of a large number of manufactured goods, as well as agricultural products.

Agricultural exports increased from $75,196,000 in September to $86,961,000 in October, principally because of larger shipments of leaf tobacco and fruit.

More than 82,000,000 pounds of unmanufactured tobacco was exported in the month, the largest total for any month since October, 1928. The value of tobacco shipments, $20,489,000, was a record for any month for which figures were available. Dried fruit exports of more than 100,000,000 pounds were the largest for any month in three years.

Shipments of grain, however, declined despite the Government's subsidy and other efforts to expand foreign markets. Wheat exports totaling 3,104,000 bushels were only a third of the average for previous months this year. Corn exports of 4,089,000 bushels equaled only a fourth of the monthly average this year.

Automobiles stood out among the export increases, rising from $1,815,000 in September to $6,713,000 in October. Other important increases were recorded for manufactured rubber, cotton, and paper articles, electrical apparatus, office appliances, chemical products, and semi-manufactured iron and steel articles.

Raw cotton exports increased in October but not as much as usual at this time of year. In the first three months of the current crop season, August to October—compared with the same months last year—shipments of raw cotton to the United Kingdom declined from 252,000,000 pounds to 63,000,000, to France declined from 152,000,000 pounds to 94,000,000, and to Germany declined from 151,000,000 pounds to 60,000,000. Shipments of cotton to Japan increased from 36,000,000 pounds to 116,000,000, comparing the three-month periods, but earlier in the year Japan's purchases were far below normal.

Brokers' Loans Drop $8,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers in securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $568,000,000.

The week ended yesterday and the total represented a decrease of $8,000,000 when compared with the previous week. Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $718,000,000.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 25.—Continued weakness in sterling exchange restricted trading in the stock market today, but prices held fairly steady. Copper stocks sold higher, and the industrial list, was a shade up. Cement shares were exceptionally weak and rubbers and oils eased. British government issues closed fractionally off while transatlantics were about unchanged. German bonds lost a point.

Paris—International securities closed lower in the bourse today, with Suez Canal declining almost 200 francs and Royal Dutch off 25. Rentes finished 20 centimes down to 68 higher. Bank of France gained 90 francs.

Liverpool—Demand for cotton futures was based principally on strength of the dollar in relation to sterling today, and prices advanced 1 to 3 points. Bombay and local traders were the chief purchasers. Wheat futures eased in late trading, owing to cheaper offerings of new Argentine wheat, and closed unchanged to ¼d lower. The market was higher early on a better demand for Manitoba, and a sale of an Australian cargo to India.

Greece Wants More American Cotton

The Commerce Department disclosed yesterday that cotton spinners and weavers in Greece had asked their government to permit increased imports of raw cotton from the United States. A report from the American commercial attache in Athens said that Greece's domestic crop was short because of decreased plantings and unfavorable weather. The report said that because of price differences the Greek government had issued cotton import permits mainly for Indian cotton, but Greek manufacturers were trying to get permits for the American product.

Sterling Falls As Gold Climbs

London, Nov. 25 (AP).—Demand of hoarders for gold and further depreciation of the pound sterling sent the price of the metal here to a new record of 149 shillings 10½ pence an ounce today. At the current rate of exchange this worked out at $34.76 an ounce. About £881,000 ($4,068,900) in gold was taken at the time of price fixing.

The dollar improved to 4.64 to the pound compared with yesterday's close of 4.64¾. The gold price was 8½ pence above yesterday's official price and 1¼ pence over that commanded in yesterday's late unofficial dealings.

New York, Nov. 25 (AP).—As the price of gold soared in London today to a new record high, the French and Swiss francs and British pound sterling fell sharply in their relationship to the dollar in the world's foreign exchange markets.

European unsettlement was given as one reason of war-fearing capitalists were said to have transferred their funds into the American currency as a backstop should trouble ensue. During the day the pound fell to $4.63¾ from $4.66¼, the rate at which it closed Wednesday. French francs dropped to 2.59¼ cents.

Chicago, Nov. 25 (AP).—Directors of Quaker Oats Co. today declared a special dividend of $1 in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share on common stock, both payable December 24 to holders of record December 6. Only the regular quarterly payments were made last year.

Prosperous Oil Year Predicted by Thompson

Austin, Tex., Nov. 25 (AP).—Ernest O. Thompson, chairman of the interstate oil compact commission and the Texas railroad commission, said today it appeared 1939 would be a "crackerjack year" for the oil industry. He ventured the prediction while outlining plans for a Statewide proration hearing here December 12.

"We've cut crude stocks through the nation 34,000,000 barrels," he said. "Gasoline stocks have now been pulled down below what they were a year ago. It may be that at the start of 1939 we should stop these withdrawals from storage."

Engineering Awards 10% Over Last Year

New York, Nov. 25 (AP).—Engineering construction awards in the past week, which was shortened by the Thanksgiving holiday, dropped to $49,970,000 compared with $58,780,000 the previous week and $72,481,000 in the same period last year, the Engineering News-Record reported today. For the year to date, however, the total is ahead of last year by nearly 10 per cent.

Large residential projects again were conspicuous among private awards, mainly in the New York metropolitan area.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Nov. 25 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agri.).—The wool market in Boston was very quiet today. Most wool houses were not inclined to make any changes in quotations on domestic wool. Slight concessions were available on occasional lots of fine territory wool in original bags, but the volume of wool available below recent selling prices was very moderate.

World Output Increases for Third Month

U. S. and Britain Gain France, Germany Drop Canada Jumps 9%

New York, Nov. 25.—For the third consecutive month world industrial production showed marked improvement, and world prices of leading raw materials and foodstuffs rose slightly, according to the statistical division of the National Industrial Conference Board today. Activity increased in September in the United States, Great Britain, Canada and the Scandinavian countries. Losses occurred in France, Germany, Belgium, Italy and Japan. Business conditions in the majority of Latin-American countries showed little net gain.

British business activity, as measured by the Economist's index, showed a one-point rise in September, largely caused by a higher volume of exports of manufactured products. Gains also appeared in coal and electricity consumption, commercial motors in use, postal receipts and bank clearings. Favorable factors in England's present situation are reduced inventories, better conditions in the United States, and an increased volume of transactions in many industries.

The French business depression continues, with iron and steel production at the lowest level in three years, and the balance of trade unfavorable. The output of automobiles and chemicals has shown a slight improvement, however.

Sharp Gain in Canada

Canadian industrial production rose 9 per cent during September—the sharpest advance in many months. Electric power, newsprint and automobile production, as well as freight carloadings, showed marked improvement, and employment in all industries advanced.

The adjusted gold value of world trade in 76 countries showed little change. For the first eight months of 1938 an analysis of United States trade showed a drop of 1.6 per cent in total exports and of 42.3 per cent in total imports as compared with the same period in 1937. Gains occurred only in exports to Europe as a whole, to the United Kingdom, Russia and South America.

Wholesale prices gained during October in England, France, Germany and Italy, as against declines in the United States and Canada. The combined index of commonstock prices on nine leading world exchanges showed little net change during October and the first week of November, with gains in New York, Paris and Berlin offset by losses in London and Amsterdam. During the first half of November the major foreign currencies weakened in terms of the dollar.

The Thrill That Comes Once in a Lifetime

Bob Burns Says—

When I first mentioned that I might go to Honolulu all my friends that'd ever been there started callin' me up and tellin' me what to do and what not to do and they got me so mixed up and worried I come pret near not going.

I felt a whole lot like Grandma Snazzy did when she took her first train ride. She went up to the conductor and says, "Which end of this thing is the engine on?" The conductor says, "Well, there's one on the back to help push us over the mountain," and she says, "Is there one on the other end too?" and he says, "Yes." Then she says, "Oh, dear, now I don't know what to do! They told me if I sat with my back to the engine, I might get sick!"

Champion Mother Ruled a Moron

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 25 (U.P.).—Physicians of the Toronto Psychiatric Hospital testified late today that Mrs. Martin Kenny, winner of the $12,500 consolation prize in the "Stork Derby," has a "mental age of 8 years and 10 months and should be confined in an institution."

Mrs. Kenny appeared under the "mental hospitals act" on a complaint made by the Ontario fire marshal that she is mentally deficient. She was arrested October 5 after the fourth fire in six months had swept her home.

Subpenas Set Aside In Track Inquiry

Philadelphia, Nov. 25 (AP).—The State Supreme Court today ordered set aside subpenas issued by a legislative committee investigating horse race wire services and directed against M. L. Annenberg and Walter Annenberg.

The Annenbergs, Philadelphia publishers, had attacked the subpenas, claiming they were issued prior to the actual establishment of the committee. The Supreme Court also ruled the committee's investigation could not extend beyond the present special session of the Legislature, which ends November 30.

The "Barclay" by

Packard Kent 5.75

WE usually let our Packard Kent Shoes speak for themselves . . . by proving to the wearer how well they wear and how smart they look. But we can't help boasting about this "Barclay" English toe style. It's the most copied last in the shoe business and the one that better-dressed men prefer. If you want a shoe that combines the inherent qualities of comfort and fine wear with smartness, then ask to see this "Barclay" by Packard Kent. Other styles, of course.

The "Encore" by

Mallory $5

Usually when a man tries on a new hat, he says it doesn't look just right. But here's a hat that makes most of our patrons say, "It's just right! Send my old one home." The Encore is a modified Tyrolean shape, dressy enough for business yet with a dash of the sporty Alpine atmosphere for town and country wear. Try one on this afternoon. In grey, brown and green mixtures.
